TIMID CONTRIBUTION TO THE ROYAL BOUQUET was made during Duncan visit by seven-year-old Laura Beth Fielding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Fielding, Fairbridge. Laura Beth told the Queen she had picked them in her back yard, and the royal recipient said the dandelions were "just beautiful." Still a bit awestruck after the Queen had moved on, Laura Beth said Her Majesty was "nice." The more formal bouquet was yellow roses. (Bill Halkett Photo.)

Cave-In Swallows 31 People, Homes

Que. Town Asleep When Hole Opens

Times News Services

ST. JEAN VIANNEY, Que.—The banks of the "River of Broken Lands" sank into an underground stream, swallowing people, homes, bridges and vehicles in this sleeping village Tuesday night, and officials estimated today at least 31 died.

Canadian Armed Forces helicopter pilots said at noon today only two bodies had yet been recovered from thousands of tons of suffocating, slimy clay mud. Another 10 persons were plucked off homes and cars sunk into a crater a mile long and more than 100 feet deep.

Rescue workers pushed through piles of mud they described as "cold lava" today in a desperate search for trapped survivors of a massive earth cave-in near Chicoutimi.

About 70 persons, many screaming and moaning, were rescued overnight from the crater of mud and slime.

Heavy rain fell today in the area as the broken remains of a score of homes tumbled through a gorge into the Riviere des Vases, a small tributary of the Saguenay River.

EVACUATE HOMES

Neighbors and relatives of missing persons waited through the night at the edge of the gorge. Several homes were evacuated and police closed off roads to curious motorists who could see debris of homes floating at dawn in the Saguenay.

Roger Landry searched the area in vain for his wife and five children, then went to stay with relatives in Kenogami.

"It was dreadful, indescribable," he told reporters. He was in the basement of his home when the slide started shortly after 11 p.m.

He ran up to the ground floor. "I called my family until I thought my lungs would burst, but there was no answer."

Jean Boucher was driving along when suddenly the road gave way in front of him. He managed to crawl up the slippery side of the crater but told police he believed his sister-in-law was still in the pit.

A Canadian Forces helicopter pilot, sent in to undertake aerial rescue operations, described the scene as "sheer desolation."

DROP OUT OF SIGHT

Capt. Maurice Roy said a whole chunk of earth and homes simply dropped out of sight into a hole 100 to 125 feet deep.

"There are sheer walls dropping down into mud."

He dropped a leather harness to a woman who said she spent the whole night stranded on the roof of her car in the hole.

"She was in a state of shock but she managed to slip the collar over her head and we raised her up. She told us that her husband had left the car just before the road about a half-mile long dropped out of sight."

GOODBYE TO QUEEN FOR NEXT 6 DAYS

Victoria said goodbye to its Royal visitors for six days today when the Queen, Prince Philip and Anne took off by chartered jet for hectic visits to the B.C. interior.

Two hundred flag-waving citizens, mostly women and children, applauded from the edge of the tarmac at Pat Bay Airport as the Royal Family's chartered Boeing 737 jet took off and wheeled east, the Queen's coat of arms flapping from the cabin window of the red, yellow and silver plane.

Called one of the most hectic days of the visit by tour officials, today's schedule calls for whistle stops at Cranbrook, where the party will change to a smaller Viscount aircraft which can be accommodated at inland airfields, then on to Fort Steele, the Dunrobin area, Selkirk College, Castlegar and Penticton. Arrival time at Penticton is 5:30 p.m.

Carnival Spirit Abounds On Princess' Park Trip

TOFINO — A beach is a fun place and that's just the way it was at Long Beach Tuesday when Princess Anne officially opened the new Pacific Rim National Park on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

Princess Anne spent a cool 20 minutes on the sands and carpeted platform on the rocks and officially opened the park.

* * *

Children scampered over rocks and explored pools. A group of head-swinging hippies enjoyed an impromptu rock session with mouth organ accompaniment. Dogs chased each other in and out of the crowd.

For Princess Anne, it was the first of two solo engagements during the 10-day centennial tour of British Columbia on which she is accompanying the Queen and Prince Philip.

After a 50-minute flight from Victoria she was driven to the park's camping ground and then walked to the beach where she met dignitaries and unveiled a dedication plaque.

* * *

For the men, Social Credit MLA Howard McDiarmid of Alberni set a high fashion note by sporting an Indian-style woven conical hat.

Any attempt at formality during the brief ceremony was spoiled by an inquisitive black and white dog who twice dashed on to the dais for a closer look at the proceedings.

Speeches were kept to a minimum.

Provincial Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan said the symbolic dedication of the park with its more than 90 miles of coastline and 50-plus islands "clearly establishes our joint determination that choice areas of our country shall be preserved for all time for all generations."

Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien said the Pacific Rim Park is one of five new national parks established in the last two years, symbolizing Canadians' recognition of "the need for man to concern himself with a world beyond that of material gain."

* * *

Turning to Princess Anne he added "it is especially fitting that someone of your generation, which has shown itself so aware of the values of nature and the need for conservation, should preside here today."

He described it as "an abstract, free-flowing cosmic xylophone."

Most people didn't hear the princess utter a word but a few Wreck Bay hippies and children were made happy as she walked through the crowd to the helicopter.

* * *

"She asked me if I'd been living here long. She was beautiful," said the woman.

To long-haired Miles Snow, from Montreal, she smiled and said: "There could be a worse place to stay than Long Beach," and to the small children about her feet she explained that she couldn't stay because the helicopter was leaving.

Thirty members of the Sierra Club held huge signs saying "Complete the park" and "Save Tsusiat."

MP David Anderson, Esquimalt-Saanich, who thought the ceremony "a trifle too formal," was definitely behind the Sierra Club's proposal for an extension of Phase 3 in the trail zone, the Tsusiat, Hobitan watershed.

UP-ISLAND TOUR

Protect Environment Message

The royal tour began reaching into the heart of B.C. residents Tuesday with a whirlwind tour of three up-Island communities and Long Beach.

If there was a message in the comings and goings, it was directed towards protection of the environment and appreciation of the bounty it bestows.

Queen Elizabeth gave the province a centennial year pat on the back for all the pioneering that has been done in the past century or so. But she added:

"You must also look ahead and determine to continue the unending work of creating and caring for a satisfying and human existence in these splendid natural surroundings."

The royal visitors had plenty of opportunity to check out the natural surroundings first-hand. While Princess Anne was on a solo trip to the Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, the Queen and Prince Philip travelled by car to Duncan, Ladysmith and Nanaimo.

The crowd of 3,000 waited patiently around the courthouse complex at Duncan for the Queen and Philip, who arrived half an hour after their scheduled 3 p.m. appearance.

A cornerstone was laid by the Queen and a golden trowel now displayed in Duncan City Hall as a memento of the visit. At the welcoming ceremonies themselves, Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife looked more regal than his visitors in flowing purple mayoral robes.

After introductions to selected Duncanites and the laying of the cornerstone for a new library, the city's senior citizen centennial project, the Queen asked Quaife if he would like to retain the trowel used. It had been inscribed to the Queen.

The mayor said he would, and promised to display it in the trophy case.

"Well, we'll consider it a loan until our next trip," Philip said.

RCMP officers estimated 15,000 people lined city streets and surrounded the courthouse area. The 6,000 around the provincial building greeted the visitors with cheers and applause under fretful, cloudy skies.

This conservative crowd, consisting of hundreds of Brownies, Guides, Cubs, Scouts, old age pensioners and a good cross-section of the community who cheered and applauded sparingly had started to slowly gather around the buildings at 10 a.m. and were still rushing in upon her arrival.

The Queen was met by Mayor Quaife in his purple velvet robes who then introduced her to chairman of the Duncan Centennial Committee Martin Lukaitis and his wife.

She then moved slowly past the crowd, stopping occasionally to speak, to where she was then introduced to Mayor of North Cowichan, Gerry Smith, and his mother; Mayor of Lake Cowichan, Moe All, and his wife; Cowichan Indian band chief, Dennis Alphonse, and his wife; MLA for Cowichan-Malahat, Robert Strachan and his wife, as well as other officials.

While the Queen and the Duke were working their way to the receiving line the Trade Suspended on U.S. Dollar As Monetary Turmoil Spreads

FRANKFURT (AP) — The government banks of West Germany and five other European countries suspended trade in United States dollars today, trying to check speculators who are swapping American currency for West German marks in expectation the mark will be revalued upward.

The Canadian dollar moved up in value slightly due to trading in it in Europe, but "the market has been very calm here this morning," a Bank of Canada spokesman said in Ottawa this morning.

International monetary authorities began consulting on ways to halt the flow of U.S. dollars to Europe, creating the worst European financial crisis since 1969.

One way to stop this is to revise upward the value of the mark, and this may be considered at a meeting of the West German cabinet in Bonn on Friday.

The U.S. treasury department is ready to help. The government will offer special securities for purchase by holders of dollars in Europe, thus soaking up excess American currency.

"As necessary, the United States is prepared to raise additional funds in the Eurodollar market and to assist with appropriate investment outlets for foreign central banks," U.S. Treasury Secretary John B. Connally said in a statement.

STARCH GOES OUT OF WAR PROTEST

WASHINGTON (CP) — Anti-war militants, buoyed by the freeing on bail of two of their leaders, were hoping to gather enough supporters to march on Congress today — third day of their "stop the government" movement.

But the starch appeared to have gone out of the demonstrations after a comparatively docile protest rally Tuesday outside the justice department landed narly 2,200 more young people in jail.

A total of around 10,000 people were arrested during the first two days of clashes between demonstrators and police.

Among them were Rennie Davis and John Froines, who were accused by the FBI of masterminding the demonstrations and charged with conspiring to violate the civil rights of Washington residents and interfering with federal employees.

of more than 2,000 with about 155 homes, is on the Riviere des Vases about two miles from where it meets the Saguenay. It is 115 miles north of Quebec City.

Rain all weekend and heavy spring runoff have raised the levels of rivers in the region.

EARTH TREMORS FELT

Small earth tremors were felt today. Ground rescue attempts were hampered by rain, mud and the fear of further slides.

Four families were rescued by police today but it was not known how many were trapped down in the pit. Cars were buried by mud and water.

ESCAPE FROM BUS

Bus driver Jules Girard was lucky. He and his 20 passengers, bound for the midnight shift at the Alcan plant in nearby Arvida, scrambled from the rear door of the bus seconds before the heavy vehicle was swallowed up.

His wife said her husband "was driving along when he noticed a little water on the street."

"At first he though it was a puddle, but then he felt the ground moving under his front wheels."

"When he looked back, the bus was gone," said Mrs. Girard.

HOUSES SANK

"Then the houses around started going. He said they just sank into the ground. He could hear people screaming for help."

The landslide was Quebec's most serious slide of the 20th century in terms of loss of life.

Others have come close in terms of destruction, most recently in the Eastern Townships mining town of Asbestos which was struck by a series of slides starting last December.

No lives were lost there, but at least 200 families were uprooted and business establishements closed when a 600-foot section of the town's main street sank more than seven feet.

In Ottawa Prime Minister Trudeau today assured the survivors of a landslide near Chicoutii, Que., of help from the armed forces.

The prime minister sent a message to Mayor Laureat Lavoie of Saint-Jean-Vianney expressing the consternation and sympathy of himself, his cabinet colleagues and all Canadians.

"I know what difficulties the rescuers face and we await with anxiety the results of their courageous efforts . . . I have already asked the minister of national defence to see what immediate help he can offer you."

LOYAL SUBJECTS braved a chill wind to wave goodbye — for the time being, at least — to royal visitors at Pat Bay Airport this morning. Several Red Ensigns were among flags waved by crowd of 200 at edge of airport tarmac as chartered royal jet took off for B.C. interior. Above, left to right, are Mrs. E. P. extending only to Vancouver. There was scattered cloud in the interior and unlimited visibility.

In charge of the flight, as he is for all the airborne part of the Royal visit, is Air Commodore Archie Winskill, a Second World War ace who decides on the suitability of flying weather and landing strips.

The party walked directly from the motorcade to the forward gangway of the jet promptly at 10:20 a.m., turning to smile and wave just once at the crowd at the edge of the tarmac. Brightest splash of color in the group was Princess Anne, in a brilliant yellow suit and tassled hat.

The high-speed tour of the interior is planned to the second, on the basis of a dry run made a month ago by Winskill and his staff. The visitors return to Victoria overnight Monday from Comox aboard the Britannia, docking here at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Lon Nol Ends Crisis By Forming New Gov't

PHNOM PENH (Reuter) — A new government has been formed in war-torn Cambodia, ending the country's 17-day leadership crisis, reliable sources said today.

They said ailing Marshal Lon Nol, who stepped down from the premier's post last month, has selected a 15-man cabinet in consultation with his deputy, former royal prince Sisowath Sirik Matak.

Effective power in the new government will reside in Sirik Matak, who ran the country during Lon Nol's recuperation period in Hawaii.

. . . DOLLAR

Most economists agree that the primary reasons that dollars are flowing out of the United States are the Vietnam war and the rising prices of American goods, prices that prompt Americans to buy abroad.

Informants in London said consultations were already under way and they involved British, French, West German and other European monetary authorities and the U.S. Federal reserve system in Washington.

In Brussels, the European Common Market went into secret session to consider the crisis. Decisions on money matters must be submitted in advance to the Common Market by its members.

Commercial German banks were exchanging U.S. dollars up to a value of 1,000 marks at the $3.585 rate.

The central bank's action amounted to an unofficial floating of the mark. Without the guarantee of central bank support at the 3.63 marks floor price, the mark must find its own level in the limited trading still going on.

At noon, the Frankfurt branch of a major American bank, First National City, was quoting the U.S. dollar to account holders only at the rate of $1 to 3.48 marks. This represented a five-per-cent drop in the value of the U.S. dollar from the rate of 3.66 set in the mark revaluation of October, 1969.

A spokesman for Deutsche Verkehrs-Kreditbank, one of West Germany's major tourist exchange agencies, said in Frankfurt the bank is still accepting dollars in notes and cheques up to a value of 500 marks. He reported the bank is still exchanging money at the rate it fixed Monday and Tuesday, 3.585 marks to the U.S. dollar.

SITUATION CONFUSED

In London, the American Express and Cooks travel agencies said they were trading normally in foreign currencies but they were giving slightly less in exchange for U.S. dollars.

Confusion reigned at Swiss banks and tourist exchange offices. One Geneva bank refused to accept either U.S. dollar bills or travellers cheques. At Zurich airport, travellers were limited to exchanging a maximum of $200.

The monetary turmoil spilled over into the gold markets. In the Paris free market, the price surged to an 18-month high of $40.31 U.S. an ounce. In London, it was fixed in the morning at the high level of $39.66. A price of $39.675 was quoted in Zurich.

The Bank of England, London dealers said, was forced to sell pounds throughout the morning to keep the U.S. dollar within the limits established by international monetary rules. The American currency was hovering just above its established floor of $2.42 to the pound.

Customs Men Find 5 Tons of Marijuana

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Armed federal officers who chased and boarded a converted shrimp boat reported finding five tons of marijuana on the vessel.

Customs Commissioner Myles Ambrose said Tuesday it was the largest single marijuana seizure in U.S. history, with a retail value of nearly $1.4 million.

The marijuana was found in 330 plastic-covered cloth bags stowed throughout the 60-foot boat. Each bag contained 20 to 70 pounds of the drug, officers said.

U.S. Customs and Coast Guard personnel boarded the Mercy Wiggins after a 20-minute chase in the Pacific off the Golden Gate.

Six men and two women have been charged in complaints filed by government attorneys at San Diego with conspiracy to import and smuggle marijuana.

OFF WEST COAST

Oil Drilling to Resume

A Shell Canada spokesman confirmed today a "farm-out agreement" has been signed for its 12.3 million acres of exploration permits off Vancouver and Queen Charlotte islands.

The deal is with Chevron Standard Ltd., which also may earn an interest in any wells brought into production by drilling two or more exploratory wells. Seismographic surveys will resume this summer after a two-year lapse.

The agreement was mentioned last week in Toronto by Shell president John F. Bookout in addressing shareholders. Bookout became president of Shell Canada last September.

Apparently it is a development of agreements effective last June which Shell Canada made with Shell Explorer Ltd. and Shell Prospector Inc., both wholly owned by Shell Oil Co., New York.

These agreements called for exploration of all Shell Canada's 72 million acres in east and west coast offshore permits, in the St. Lawrence lowlands, the Yukon and Northwest Territories, to be conducted over six years from that date.

Including a research program on tar sands of the Athabaska and heavy oil of the Peace River district which may be carried on over 10 years, Shell estimated total spending would be in the region of $250 million. Shell Canada would retain a half interest in the undertakings.

Shell is now drilling on its east coast offshore acreage, having, concluded a two-year program on the west coast in 1969 after drilling 14 wells crowd broke out into whistles and cheers and children could be seen running around and through the crowd trying to catch a glimpse of them. A group of boys scurried away from the group carrying a Union Jack.

After the Cowichan senior secondary school band played O Canada, Quaife welcomed the Queen.

Upon completion of his opening line where he said the area whole-heartedly welcomed the Queen the crowd interrupted with cheers and whistles once again.

The Queen then signed the guest book and was then presented with a beautiful bouquet of yellow roses by Miss Duncan, 19-year-old Jennifer Williams.

While the Queen was being introduced to Miss D. R. Goeghegan and Miss N. C. Denny, the only freemen of the city, Prince Philip was busy talking to Miss Duncan.

Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip, along with Quaife, then worked their way slowly past members of the Cowichan branch of the Royal Canadian Legion, who they spent several minutes with, then past over 600 cubs, scouts, brownies and guides, until she came to the site to lay the cornerstone with a blessing from Rev. G. A. Kerr.

Upon completion she proceeded slowly to the calvacade of cars while children pushed the ropes and were held back by officers and the crowd closed in behind her.

Pensive, Wind-Blown Princess

Jennifer Williams, who is also B.C.'s Indian princess, had met the Queen this summer at Yellowknife, NWT, as one of 10 Indian princesses introduced.

"I found her a lot more friendly this time," Miss Williams said. "She seems a lot more relaxed and at ease and so was I."

Miss Williams, who presented yellow roses to the Queen Tuesday, feels she may have been more receptive to the Queen this time because she has gained more confidence in her roles as Queen of Duncan and B.C. Indian princess.

"After I gave the flowers to the Queen and she asked me if I was Miss Duncan I told her I had met her before and explained where. She said oh, you are one of those hey, and then laughed," Miss Williams said.

"I was so busy watching the Queen that when Prince Philip came up to shake my hand I was surprised. They are a very attractive couple.

"Even though I saw her in Yellowknife it was sure nice to see her in Duncan."

Sir Allan Mackenzie, a Duncan commissionaire who the Queen talked to the longest next to Quaife, said he found the experience thrilling.

Mackenzie, 58, said the Queen's private secretary Michael Adeane, who he has known for several years, introduced them.

"I came from Ballater, Scotland, which is a village near where she vacations every summer. She told me she had heard of my family and we talked about Ballater."

The Queen and Prince Philip met another Indian princess at Ladysmith and watched loggers scramble up an 85-foot spar pole and play an outdoor game of "darts" with double-bladed axes.

At Nanaimo, the Queen watched a sample of the annual Nanaimo-to-Vancouver race across the Strait of Georgia scheduled for July, then spoke to winner Duncan Tait, 17, a high school student who edged out 49 other tubbers for a centennial plate.

The youth told the Queen that he raced in last year's bathtub derby and has participated in several smaller events.

Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney said the prince told him at one point that he did a great deal of travelling and always found a lack of old-fashioned bathtubs.

"Prince Philip said, 'Now I know why — they are all in Nanaimo,'" the mayor reported.

While travelling up-Island, the royal nostrils got more and more clogged with the pollution side of economic progress as they got a strong whiff of the rotten-egg smell of the pulp industry.

Philip remarked on the offensive odor to Robert Strachan, MLA, who told the prince the smell came from a mill eight miles northeast of Duncan.

"Are you doing anything about it," Philip asked.

"We are trying," Strachan replied. He said the prince suggested "you make them put a plug in it."

. . . PACIFIC RIM VISIT

Chretien said he too was aware of the Sierra Club's proposal.

"We need the support of the people to get more parks," he said.

It was fifficult getting a park this size, he said, and he wasn't sure if any additions could be made.

As the second helicopter returned for the dignitaries, the spectators were gathering around a 30-foot-long barbecue pit for a piece of fresh salmon. The 500 pounds of salmon, consumed after the officials left, were provided by the councils Ucluelet and Tofinoa.

Volunteer Al Johnson, a property owner soon to be expropriated, said he was told by the mayor of Tofino that Princess Anne was unable to eat Pacific salmon.

"The whole thing is a facade, it's just a nothing thing," he said.

Long Beach resident and school bus driver Arthur LeGros had similar sentiments.

"Don't believe all the garbage you hear from the parks board. Remember everybody isn't happy."

But the transient residents of Wreck Bay, who will soon have to move on, and the rest of the crowd, were happy as they ate the salmon to the sound of the pounding surf as the sun broke through the clouds.

'It's About Time We Stopped Snarling'

By JOHN RODERICK

HONG KONG (AP) — "Fawning!" the British colonial type snorted his annoyance. "Why do you Americans keep fawning on the Chinese? They're still the same, you know. They haven't changed."

He raised his brandy glass and added: "All this fuss about a few smiles. It doesn't mean a thing."

He was talking about China's new people-to-people diplomacy as reflected in the visit of U.S. table tennis players and a group of correspondents.

Disagreement with this view came from an American businessman who once lived in China but has been in Hong Kong since 1949.

"It's not fawning," he said. "Fawning suggests boot licking. The smiles, in fact, are coming from the Chinese. We are only responding to them, as we should. It is about time that we stopped snarling at each other and re-established our relations on a sensible basis."

'FAWNING' TOO STRONG

A West European with more than 40 years' experience in China and on its periphery sums it up a bit differently.

"I would agree that fawning is too strong a word," he said. "But the United States could not have reacted otherwise. The Chinese have begun to grow stronger since the Cultural Revolution. They are proceeding from a position of strength. Their influence is growing in Asia while the American image is tarnished by Viet Nam and My Lai. American society is in mortal danger. It must come to terms with the Chinese and President Nixon has recognized this."

That the Chinese have not changed basically in their attitude toward the U.S. government seemed evident throughout the Americans' visit last month. Everywhere slogans exhorted all countries to unite against the "American aggressor and his running dogs" in Vietnam.

The smiles were for Americans, not for the government: The Chinese repeatedly made this distinction themselves.

After the Communists took power in 1949, they chose to put all their eggs in the Soviet basket.

Ideologically, the two parties now are poles apart. The quarrel is over Marxist purity, a dispute which to some people seems as futile as schisms of medieval Christianity.

When Nikita Khrushchev buried the rigid doctrines of Stalinism in 1956 and decreed peaceful coexistence with other countries, the Chinese portrayed him as a traitor to Marxist principles.

The Cultural Revolution was a widespread campaign to eradicate the Khruschevian "revisionist" influence from China.

Now victorious, Mao presumably believes China can afford to relax both at home and abroad. Westerners seen during this correspondent's visit to China said the country is less uncertain of itself than it was last year, and far removed from the suspicions of the Cultural Revolution.

LAW PLAYS MIDWIFE TO HUGE SEA TURTLE

Holman answered a call from a South Beach resident who wanted him to do something about the turtle which had crawled onto the beach to lay her eggs in the sand.

"We're not coming to chase turtles off the beach with a stick," said Holman. "She'll go back down into the sea on her own when she's finished what she has to do."

As Mamma Turtle dropped her hundreds of eggs into the hole she had scooped in the sand with her flippers, Holman stood by.

Dealing With Basics

THE SPECIAL PARLIAMENTARY committee which the government proposes should carry out a study of "the nature and kind of legislation required to deal with emergencies that may arise from time to time" will be an important one to watch. The reason is that the emergencies envisaged are those that may "by reason of lawlessness or violence in Canadian society . . . endanger the existence of government or the maintenance of the peace and public order." In other words, what may be sought by the special committee is a peacetime substitute or alternative for the War Measures Act, and its successor the Public Order Act which lapsed April 30.

The government is to be congratulated on permitting the Public Order Act to expire at the end of its stated term. The presumed emergency for which it was created is certainly not present now, even though Quebec's Premier Bourassa was highly incensed at the federal government's action. It is not a sound condition for the Canadian public to become habituated to the presence of emergency legislation on the books. Emergencies should be emergencies, and severely restrictive legislation to deal with them should not become a casual part of our country's laws.

A restriction or a special police power which becomes habitual can the more easily be increased without public outcry. All unduly restrictive legislation is imposed primarily to curb a small minority "for the good of the people" as a whole. But the majority live under the law too, after struggling through many generations to abolish the arbitrary powers which the state once routinely held.

Mr. Bourassa was insistent that the FLQ be made permanently illegal, as it had been for a time. But Justice Minister Turner wisely believes the existing Criminal Code is adequate to deal with the FLQ under normal circumstances. The difference will be that instead of membership in the organization being automatically a crime, it will be necessary to prove conspiracy to perform some illegal act.

It is these considerations which give added interest to the creation of a special committee to review the whole situation and recommend for or against legislation to cope with threats to the existence of government or the public order. If Parliament agrees to set up such a committee, its composition will be important.

This is not an easy era for governments, as is being demonstrated in the unfortunate turmoil in our neighbor to the south, and in lesser ways in this country. But harshly repressive legislation to cope with problematical events which may or may not occur is the last thing Canada needs or wants. We have a sound, democratic legislative structure in this country. Its preservation should be a priority concern for the government and for any of its committees.

It Still Takes Action

THE ECONOMIC COUNCIL OF Canada was created by Parliament in 1963 to study the performance of the economy and to advise the government on the middle and long-term economic problems facing the country. It was not meant to act as a critic of the government's day-to-day actions. In addition, the Council was to keep watch on the private as well as the public sector.

Dr. Arthur Smith, chairman of the Council, appeared recently before the Commons Finance Committee and fulfilled his function as disinterested prophet. His predictions were, however, sombre and filled with political meaning. He felt that the problems of inflation and unemployment would persist for some years to come. We would be wrestling with inflation for the next decade, he said, and so-called full employment (four per cent unemployment) would take at least three years to achieve under the best circumstances. Dr. Smith was concerned, too, that a too-rapid growth rate would distort the economy.

Like other professional observers, the Council chairman can see no overall strategy by which to attack the twin problems of inflation and unemployment. His later remarks to the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce urging expansion had a ritualistic, gung-ho tone, but they did not appreciably qualify his previous gloomy forecast to the Commons committee.

Canadians, with or without jobs, whether or not pinched by inflation, cannot wait for the mere passage of time to disclose a safe course between the Scylla and Charybdis of inflation and unemployment. Dr. Smith's prognosis, a product of his experience and wisdom, deserves attention and may even be correct, but something more pragmatic and active is demanded of the politicians to whom he delivered his message.

Training for No Jobs

THEORETICALLY, JOB-TRAINING programs in various United States prisons are among the best means available to restore inmates to a useful, acceptable position in society. The difficulty, according to a recent survey, seems to be that the theory never quite measures up to actuality — and for a number of reasons.

Despite the publicity given to the technique, few prisons have adequate teaching staff or equipment with which to train inmates. When there is instruction and machinery available, too often it is obsolete. Prisoners, for instance, won't wear the shoes made in the Norfolk State Prison in Massachusetts because they have no arch supports and are made on machinery 30 years old. Men taking the shoemaking course find, on release, that there are no jobs in private industry open to them because the equipment in prison was discarded years earlier by the trade.

Furthermore, research indicates that a substantial number of prison "industries" lose money in spite of low pay for inmate workers — a situation paralleled in parts of Britain.

A promising development in some areas today is the effort to interest private business in establishing training and production programs within the prison, using up-to-date methods and equipment. Given the advantage of learning a trade under such circumstances, prisoners stand a fair chance of finding employment on the outside. But with the labor market as it is today, many private concerns, interested as they may be in prisoner rehabilitation, find employment demands on the outside as much, or more, than they can handle, leaving small opportunity for entry into the prison environment.

FROM OTTAWA — By MAURICE WESTERN

Short-Circuiting the Appliance Users

THE ECONOMIC Council of Canada, in partnership with the Science Council of Canada, has jointly sponsored the study, Standards in Canada, written by Dr. Robert Legget, formerly of the Canadian Standards Association. It is to be hoped, after this experience, that the economic council will avoid entangling alliances. The report is a dud. It would be an exaggeration to say that it detracts from the sum of human knowledge. But it achieves the same end by so blurring the raw and nasty facts that in the end they become scarcely visible to the naked eye.

Western

The Economic Council knows much better. It has been keenly aware for a long timee of the abuse of standards for restriction of trade. On its own, it would certainly have produced a penetrating report which might have had salutary effects on Parliament Hill and in provincial government offices across the nation. Instead the tax-payers' money has gone for this pussy-footing document.

No one can be opposed to standards emanating from an impartial authority and imposed for reasons of health and safety. The objection is to standards developed by a private interest with an eye on curtailment of competition.

This possibility is admitted in the report. The section dealing with it is remarkably brief but it can be found with diligent research. We are offered a quotation from a British standards expert: "Some of the worst hidden barriers to trade concern electrical equipment. Almost all electrical equipment exported to some countries has to conform in such matters as the adequacy of insulation or rise in temperature and has to be approved as conforming."

Soothing Words

Having mentioned this, presumably hypothetical, danger, Dr. Legget rushes in with soothing words. "It must be made clear that the Canadian electrical industry, through CSA (Canadian Standards Association) has gone out of its way to assist with electrical imports, CSA having arranged for testing to CSA standards to be carried out in laboratories in Great Britain and continental Europe."

What charming wording for an implausible thought. "The Canadian electrical industry, through CSA." Yes, indeed. CSA, a "non-profit" organization, is the child of the Canadian electrical industry which, down through the years, has profited hugely from its operations.

We learn that: "The standards-writing part of CSA is financed by money from membership dues, sale of publications and an annual grant from the government of Canada" and that the budget totals about $340,000 exclusive of office space and certain services. For years the grant was $10,000; in the latest estimates it appears as $56,000. Most of the money is an investment by the manufacturers. He who pays the piper calls the tune.

Bamboozling

CSA has no legal power to enforce standards and none to keep goods out of the country. It has, however, contrived to give itself a semi-official appearance and has thus succeeded in bamboozling provincial governments and agencies. When an article without the approved stamp appears on store shelves, the attorney-general sends police or other enforcement officers to the premises. Shortly thereafterwards merchants read in the house organ items such as the following:

"Toronto: Perfect Manufacturing and Supplies Corp. of Montreal has been fined $100 after pleading guilty to selling unapproved Japanese-made equipment to a Metro Toronto store.

"Ontario Hydro Inspector John Gilmour testified that he visited a store in Agincourt October 1 and discovered a radio and a radio-phonograph which had not been approved for sale by the Canadian Standards Association."

What we have enjoyed is a system of private law enforced by government for the benefit of manufacturers not content with the protection openly afforded them in the shape of customs duties. Nowadays there is some camouflage; CSA makes a point of enlisting the co-operation of a few consumers, resembling probably the same government consumers consulted by the authors of this report.

This is a farce and there is little to suggest that it will be made much better by the new standards council based as it is on an anaemic federal statute. Even the report admits that we need some sort of agency to act as a standards ombudsman in case there may be "inadvertent" use of standards as "the equivalent of very restrtive tariff barriers."

For lack of it we are being bled white by the electrical manufacturers. They can and do keep imports off the market for many months, evidently in hope that importers will simply give up in desperation. CSA tells us of its travel plans. It is strange that they do not seem to extend to the United States which is quite as standards-conscious as Canada. The electric ranges which serve tens of millions of American homes cannot be sold in this country. South of the border they are safe; north of it a peril. We get this ultra-protection and anyone who doubts its magnitude is welcome to make price comparisons.

Fear Reprisal

Why is not more said about it publicly, especially by victimized importers? The answer is clear from my correspondence. To quote from a typical letter; "We ask that this be considered confidential for at this stage we do not wish to do anything which would antagonize CSA towards the manufacturer whom we respresent for no doubt they will be writing to CSA shortly. But things look pretty black right now."

Fear of reprisals. That is the answer. For consumers too, things will go on looking pretty black while this situation continues unremedied. No one would guess it though from the latest soporific report to be handed down in Ottawa.

FROM WASHINGTON — By TIM TRAYNOR

New Drive on Surveillance

MUCH HAS been said recently about the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the use or misuse of government surveillance powers. What stood out initially was the outcry prompted by a number of unsettling developments — claims that congressional phones were being tapped, Senator Muskie's angry disclosure of FBI surveillance of Earth Day rallies, and the public airing of stolen FBI files detailing extensive FBI activity on campuses and generally with respect to student and black militancy.

Traynor

Now, in its turn, the Nixon administration is sounding off, and the upshot is likely to be a whole new round in the controversy.

The president gave the lead in his recent interview with a group of editors by voicing strong support for FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, and by endorsing the FBI assertion that congressional telephones had never been tapped, as claimed most adamantly by Hale Boggs, a leading Democratic member of the House of Representatives. Vice-President Agnew followed up with a charge that Democratic leaders were making claims which would tend to discredit Mr. Hoover and the FBI in order to gain favor with the radical left.

Mr. Agnew disputed statements by Senator George McGovern, the only announced Democratic presidential candidate, and he challenged Senator Muskie's charge that FBI activities on Earth Day constituted "general political surveillance," saying that the FBI had gone to the rally Muskie attended not to watch him or others like him (the report on the event contained only a one-line reference to Sen. Muskie's anti-pollution speech) but to keep an eye on Rennie Davis and other individuals "better know for their subversive proclivities than their interest in ecology."

A-G Weighs In

Attorney-General John Mitchell has also weighed in, charging that Sen. Muskie had "twisted the facts to make a political headline," and accusing Mr. Boggs of making "reckless charges." (Mr. Boggs says the U.S. with Mr. Hoover on the scene is no longer a free country, that the FBI has adopted Gestapo and Soviet tactics; to back this up, he cites an alleged tap placed on his phone — a tap for which he cannot, however, produce evidence.)

With the Mitchell counter-attack went a set of outspoken — and highly controversial — observations on the use of wire-tapping by the government. He strongly reasserted the administration's claim that the executive branch of government has an inherent right to conduct wire taps without a court order in circumstances where domestic developments — as opposed to external developments — are deemed to create a threat to the nation's security. (A federal judge recently rejected this contention, and the decision is being appealed by the administration.)

Mr. Mitchell contended that the greatest threats were domestic — as had been shown by the assassinations of four presidents — and that the government should be free to order wiretapping of "domestic subversives," and to protect the government from overthrow.

The Agnew-Mitchell comments have raised the administration's profile substantially and it is to be expected that there will be a further poisoning of an already sulphurous atmosphere. The whole matter has been thoroughly politicized and facts are in danger of being totally obscured. Even so, certain points can be made.

Monitored Conversations

While charges that the FBI taps congressional phones are unsubstantiated, it has been shown that the agency has monitored conversations in at least one congressional office through the use of a recorder strapped to the back of an informer enlisted to talk to a congressman subsequently charged with taking a bribe. (The Supreme Court has recently ruled this to be legal, on the basis that a person is naturally vulnerable to the risk that the other party to the conversation is an informer, and that recording by an informer makes no basic difference.)

It is not possible for Mr. Hoover, and the administration behind him, to close the gap completely between statements, in response to earlier snooping charges, that there was no surveillance of Congress, and the revelation of the use of electronic equipment. The administration's explanation is that the use of the recorder, in view of the legal attitude toward it, does not fall under the justice department's definition of surveillance; that is, to say the least, a technical and forced position. Accordingly, in the light of the disclosure of the recording episode, Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield has switched from defence of the FBI to support of demands for a thoroughgoing investigation of its operations.

Looking Back

From the Times of May 5, 1911:

Bearing all the marks, figures and carvings which were gouged in it a half century or more ago by the Indians of the Far North, a large totem pole fully sixty feet in length and about three feet in diameter now lies on the G.T.P. docks, having been brought south from Massett last week. The big stick so grotesquely arranged is to be shipped to Ottawa to be placed outside the G.T.P. hotel Chateau Laurier.

Letters will be considered for publication only if the writer is clearly identified to the editor, who may permit pen names at his discretion. Submissions will be edited and may be condensed. Short letters are favored. None will be returned.

A New System

I have heard many different ideas about the kind of government Canada should have, but most are held by just a few people. The NDP are promising to establish a socialistic government that will be like heaven on earth. If we let them do it I assure you it will go the opposite way. That's exactly the way the Communists got started in Russia. When they had the ruling power in their hands they did away with democracy.

Let me suggest a real people's government. Let us dissolve the existing constitution and the party system and convert Canada to a new Social Democratic Christian Republic with a new constitution that will solve all the problems in Canada. The government would be more powerful because it would have the majority behind it.—J. W. Thiessen, 1343 Finlayson.

Hysterical

The article written by Clement Chapple in the May 1 Times entitled "Wieners and Beans from Poor and Peanuts from City Hall," had a hysterical note.

Reg Clarkson was not fired by Walter Olszewski but by the Low Income Executive at the request of the majority of our members. Reg was fired for loss of confidence at the poverty level because he continually ignored and opposed important executive decisions.

The salaries mentioned were set by the Federal Government and not by any member of the Low Income Group and in the end would hopefully (if we receive further Federal Assistance) help hundreds of welfare mothers, not just 30, as inferred.

Walter is accepted by the Federal Government as a social animator and this is a salaried position.

The Low Income Group began the Housecleaning Association two months before our grant arrived and as a result went into debt, so we have fully used up the $10,000 and now we are back to wieners and beans.

Clement is doing the public a great disservice by deceiving them into believing that the Low Income Group is rusty and creaking. Annual elections of new members in October will show evidence of a new "poor power" in Victoria. These will be the educated, unemployed, angry, youths who will not be as patient with the apathetic public, our bureaucratic governments, and this present destructive Welfare System, as the present executive has been. — Elaine Olszewski, Vice-President; Victoria Low Income Group.

'Day of the Apocalypse' Appeared to Be at Hand'

By ALAN BRIEN
New Statesman

LONDON — The purpose of the Soledad brothers rally at the Central Hall, Westminster, last month was not to provide information to the outsider.

The well-known independent spectator, with his ever-open mind, could easily have left still slightly confused about the relationships between the accused, the charges upon which they were arraigned, and quite how Angela Davis was involved.

What was staged was an evening of spoken jazz, a jam session of revolutionary arias, angry improvisations, eloquent variations, bitter funny outbreaks of frustrated feeling.

'Right On'

The parallel was underlined by the behavior of the audience which would rise in sections, with clenched fists and cheering lips, to spur on the performers, releasing an occasional individual, ecstatic 'yippee' and an approving 'right on,' or a low, breathy, long-drawn 'yeeeeeeeh',

What really mattered was emotion, not argument, the deep rumbling voice of the gut rather than the thin impartial pronouncement of the brain.

The message was simple and direct: these people are in danger of being executed, not because they have committed crimes, but because they are black.

The evidence, whether perjured or honest, the rules of court, whether fair or biased, the behavior of the police, whether brutal or correct — all these are irrelevant, ran the theme.

Because this is a war of the oppressed against the exploiter, the blacks are in the front ranks of the battlefield. But the rest of us will be there soon.

'Whitey, you're on your way,' sang out Penny Jackson, her thin arms outspread, her bushy Afro-cut head thrown back, caught in the follow-spot like a soloist hitting her high C, or a black bomber transfixed by searchlights, 'You're just like us.'

James Baldwin, Stepin Fetchit on the warpath, his mobile puppydog face alternately sunk in funeral gloom or split with a piano-keybroad grin, snapped: 'Mr. Nixon is also your President. If my child has no future, no one in this room has any future."

I do not want to suggest that no facts were presented, that the audience of 3,000, with hundreds turned away outside, indulged only in an orgy of passions and feelings without ever knowing or caring about the prisoners they had come to support.

Among the speakers was John Thorne, a handsome bearded battling lawyer of that new, brave breed at the American bar who willingly stand alongside their clients in the dock and are carried off with them to the cells.

He gave us the background to George Jackson, Penny's brother, who has spent 11 years in jail, seven and a half in solitary confinement, and could remain there for life, guilty of stealing $70 at the age of 18. Now he is charged with murdering a guard, for which the only sentence is death.

Howard Moore talked about Angela Davis — 'a person of indescribable beauty and sweetness beyond any pictures or posters you have ever seen' — but without detailing the charges (murder, kidnapping, conspiracy) made against her. There were tape recordings and films, plaintive voices and arresting portraits, but they unrolled far up and far away like echoes from another world.

Every now and then, a phrase struck through, sharp and transfixing, such as George Jackson's prophecy: 'I can still smile sometimes but by the time this is all over I may not be a nice person."

'Brothers and sisters' was the form of address used by almost all the speakers, and it was uttered with a kind of unselfconscious conviction so different from the ritual invocation to comradeship and fraternity of the Trade Union Congress or the Labour Party conferences. The speeches were all sermons preached to the converted — but who else listens to sermons? The atmosphere they clearly intended to evoke, and often overwhelmingly succeeded in arousing, was a huge, family get-together, a clan gathering, where the people discussed were all familiar figures, distant relatives about whom news was sought, so that the members pick out what they want to hear in random patterns. It was not the way a professional PR consultant would have planned the campaign.

JAMES BALDWIN

Uninhibited

The jam-packed, enthusiastic, uninhibited audience, perhaps a third black, had almost as ambivalent an attitude towards what I suppose we have called the media as the Labour Party.

Reporters bought their own tickets, queued at the doors, squeezed in where they could, and were offered not even a handout. The ushers, mainly black youngsters, wore odds and ends of uniform, with official armbands and acres of badges.

But no one would admit to being of a higher rank than any other. Whenever television lights turned into the hall, a furious chant of 'off, off, off' arose, newspapers were held in front of faces, and demands were expressed to be told 'who's behind those cameras'.

Eventually, the platform was forced to appeal for toleration of the publicity — 'we want to show the brothers and sisters back home that we raised the roof here in London.'

It was an attitude I could understand. The rally was for the ralliers, not for eavesdroppers and strangers, though a welcome was extended to the FBI and the CIA and the British security services.

The most determined and deep-seated feelings were awoken, not so much by the Soledad brothers, or any other specific prisoners, but by references to the world-wide oppression and suppression of blacks. (No mention of Bangla Desh.)

M'Joski, of the Indian Workers' Movement, received the most torrential applause of the evening when he denounced all white establishment parties as false friends and fair-weather allies of black power.

Hosannas

The difference between Tory and Labour, he shouted, is between 'a cut-throat and a burglar' — and the hall rocked to one loud, reverberating 'right on.'

And his point that the two million immigrants are alternatively called a minority which has no right to special treatment and then denounced for being far too large a section of the community to be absorbed, that they were third-class citizens so that the second-class white proles could feel superior, brought out a joyful hosanna of laughter and cheers.

There was much talk of revolution, of strikes that could paralyze the nation, indeed the Western world, of the right to rely on guns and violence, of the imminent collapse of imperialism everywhere, of Mao Tse-tung as the only champion of the poor in power today. (I noticed, by the way, that 'so-called' is now a potent rhetorical term, even being used in the phrase 'so-called black people.')

At the end, the audience left bubbling and chirping with cheery catharsis. But I was left wondering — what next? There was no local cell or branch to join, no grass-root chores to volunteer to fulfil, no filling in of party cards or buying tickets for dances, socials, agitprop plays, no announcements of future demos.

Perhaps, as James Baldwin said, if we are going to liberate each other, we must first start within ourselves. Only when it has really happened in our brains, will it happen now outside.

Whatever else the rally proved, there was little doubt that few other political or religious bodies ever give to their supporters the conviction that the day of the apocalypse is at hand which I recognized in the Central Hall, Westminster, on a Tuesday night.

It's Over Our Heads

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

We had always understood there was something of the confessional atmosphere to a beauty salon. Under the hair dryer, the great outpouring of hot air evidently prompts a great outpouring of confidences; a sudden opening of hearts.

POPE PAUL

Not until now, however, did we appreciate the truly spiritual issues involved in the arrangement and rearrangement of human hair. When we first saw the headline: "Hair affects man's morals, Pope declares," naturally we assumed this was a reference to a popular, somewhat uninhibited, musical spectacle.

But no, The Pope was taking to 600 hairdressers in Vatican City, exhorting them to work with sobriety because their art affects man's morals. Setting aside for the moment the sobriety with which hairdressers are wont to work, the association between their art (shouldn't we really say calling?) and man's morals is a concept that will have to be explained more thoroughly to us before we could really claim to have grasped it.

Perhaps a clue lurks under the bouffant logic of the Pope's subsequent observation that the hairdressers, attending an international convention, should "serve healthy beauty with authentic and sober art, facilitating self-respect and respect of one's neighbor . . . Hairdressing can be related to man's morals and to the symbolism through which he interprets his life. That means one has to recognize in hairdressing a reflection of the idea we hold of man, and therefore it should always be worthy of man and of the believer."

Admittedly it cannot be easy for his Holiness to speak strongly and convincingly to each and every trade or other group that assembles expectantly before him. But surely it verges on the impossible to assign each of them a vital role in the spiritual destiny of mankind, as he appears to have attempted to do in this case.

If the "respect of one's neighbor" rests on hair styling, perhaps it is time to move house. We are aware, of course, that a certain segment of society rests its moral judgment solely on hair length. Even here, creeping sideburns and vanishing collars have progressively brought a moderation of opinion. Still, it's less than admirable and it is discouraging to find the philosophy so well entrenched at the Vatican.

We cannot be sure just what kind of message the 600 hairdressers carried away with them. Did they get the point that eludes us? Did they go back to their establishments with a clear idea of the styles that work for good and those that wouldn't?

Royal Aldermanic Tour: Can't We Do Any Better?

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

There is a wild mistaken impression abroad in the land that the monarchy in Canada will eventually be done in by the tousle-haired, rude-voiced crew which lusts eagerly to transform us into a republic. Dear reader, do not be led astray by the reported voices of the rabble.

Rest content upon the knowledge that the monarchy — when it goes — will be done in by the very people, the befuddled, stumble-minded clots who claim to hold it most dear.

These are the unfathomable-petty, the intellectual eunuchs and the lint-picking administrators who have devised the insane little roundelay that passes for a royal tour of British Columbia in the year of our sovereign 1971.

Have we learned nothing at all from the days of linen-jacketed toadies in the tropics? Nothing at all gleaned from boot-licking remittance men in the nether regions of the colonies?

A look at the itinerary makes clear that nothing changes, that obstinacy reigns over all, that the bureaucratic mind that was castrated of imagination in 1938 remains unconstructed, sterile to the winds of change (and the hopes of the poor bored royalty itself).

"Informality will be the keynote of the Centennial '71 royal tour," was the original announcement of that hard-working gentleman by name of L. J. Wallace, the centennial chairman who doubles as Mr. Bennett's executive assistant.

The premier himself wanted the people "to let their hair down in a nice way." The premier added: "I'm sure the Queen doesn't want to meet only officialdom."

★ ★ ★

Whatever the Queen wants, the Queen doesn't get. Mr. Wallace and Mr. Bennett apparently are not strong enough to fend off the heavy breathing of jumped-up officialdom which has just come into possession of its first pair of patent leather shoes and an expensive pair of supp-hose.

After studying the royal itinerary I now have a clear idea of the picture that gracious lady on the throne will carry away from this particular frontier as to the real people of B.C.: an Ernie Broome-ish figure, alderman in rank, blue blazer on top, bagged grey flannels at the knee, sole inhabitants of crummy little airport after airport, stiff occupants of civic reception after civic reception.

All B.C. women, the Queen will assume, will have blue-rinsed hair, glistening pebbles on their glasses, wear white gloves constantly and tend to curtsy in arthritic fashion at every twitch of the royal glance. That's us. We might as well ship a wax museum to Buck House and save the fare.

The arrival on Monday, for example. What would a royal couple flying from London be dying to meet? Of course — "the mayors of Vancouver and Richmond and their wives."

Can you not hear that buzz of excitement on the approaching plane — what is the mayor of Richmond like?

Later in the day in Victoria, the "mayors of adjoining municipalities and their wives." To be followed in Duncan at 3 the next day by "mayors of surrounding municipalities" and in Nanaimo at 4:50 by "mayors of neighboring towns."

★ ★ ★

It is not, you know, as if this is some strange foreboding land to Her Majesty. This is her eighth time in Canada. Since we change our aldermen (and presumably, the aldermen, their wives) about as often as Haiti changes dictators, the same white gloves that grasped the royal hand some years ago will clutch again.

What is the purpose of it all? Why don't we just exchange tensed palms cast in wax? The whole thing could be done by mail and you wouldn't need 27 chief petty officers as a Greek chorus.

I yield to no man in my respect for the dignified woman who must suffer through this insufferable multitude of bores in every provincial gas station in the realm. I stand behind no one in my regard for the tough, slanging figure of her husband who has kept the institution alive for a few added years by his wit and his willingness to spray garden hoses over those bothersome photogs.

But I fall asleep weeping in the knowledge that their roles will be made redundant in this country by the dunderheads and minor league social butterflies who festoon themselves to the hem of the royal troupe.

Those honest citizens on the fringe who can't penetrate the thicket of sycophants are eventually going to say "Thanks a lot, ducks, but no thanks," and go back to watering the gardenias out of sheer boredom at the grade school pageant air to the whole thing.

In Kuala Lumpur, Bognor Regis, Wagga Wagga, a thousand other forgettable doughnut stands, and now lowly Duncan. Do they really expect this long-suffering woman to muster up ersatz enthusiasm for yet another block of concrete? They don't demand standards like that from Academy Award types.

Day after day it is the same. Sign the book. Inspect the guard. Lift that bale. Meet that bore.

The gem of all is Dawson Creek, May 8. "2:30 p.m. — Arrive Dawson Creek airport. 2:50 — Depart by air." And what in your heart of hearts, your wildest dreams, if you had 20 minutes of your life in Dawson Creek, would you do?

Of course. Meet the mayors of the surrounding municipalities — not to forget their wives in the white gloves and awkward curtsies. Suffering Jehosephat! Is this the fate of the rugged west?

Ah, Dawson Creek! Destined to live in royal memory forever, in the pantheon of 20-minute legends along the Chittagong, Tunbridge Wells and Warracknabeal. Cast an eye yourself over the itinerary. Are they all daft?

The point is that a tour like this is the lazy way out. It's the easy thing to copy the standard, 1938, open libraries-and-turn sods type of tour. Copy the faded original.

To do it properly, to invent a common sense schedule and a more informal format that would in fact strengthen the feeling Canadians have for the Queen (and vice-versa) would take a little effort, a little thought and a touch of courage. The lazy way was simpler.

It quackles.

It maketh merry.

It's called Cold Duck. A fowl, crazy name for a great new sparkling wine. But served chilled, that nice 'n easy blend of Champagne and fine sparkling Burgundy bubbles up into fun-loving taste. Pop open a Cold Duck. Some new merriment from Andrés.

Andrés Cold Duck . . . a blend of Champagne and fine sparkling Burgundy.

A Little More Liquid History

By ART STOTT

We watched from a distance, but with a telescope powerful enough to bring out the craters on the moon. Through the lens, the Britannia came up sharp and clear — adding a little more history to the liquid that separates this southern point of Canada from the United States.

★ ★ ★

The setting could not have been better. Smaller yachts and pleasure boats, scrubbed shiny, made random progress through the Strait toward Victoria. Fishboats, coming in from their grounds, travelled the other way. The sea sparkled under sunlight striking the chop.

Beyond Trial Island the Royal Yacht swung into the final westward run, two Canadian destroyer-escorts safely astern. The ship with the visitors looks business-like, a little more square-faced in the forward superstructure than we had expected, but efficient. From the bow fluttered the Union Jack, from the forward mast the Queen's flag as Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom, from the tallest centre staff, her personal flag for Canada, then the red-and-white Canadian Maple Leaf on the aft mast and the white ensign flying at the stern.

Few people were on deck, two of them near the bow. If either was Lawrie, who promised to wave to us, he had his hat on and we couldn't identify him.

Over a half century we've been watching various craft pass up and down the Strait, from the rum-running speedboats of American prohibition days; the great white liners of the CPR in the era of the luxury run to the Orient and back to Victoria, Canada's first port of call; through the war years, when huge vessels mooched along, blacked out; and to the later traffic of the new cruise ships, flood-lit jewel cases in the night. We've seen our share of yachts, large and small. We've noted the increase in size and traffic by freighters. We're familiar with the grey lines of naval craft, Canadian, American and British, with hovercraft and hydrofoils.

We remember the Pamir, square-rigged under canvas, perpetuating a legend, and more recently, the Japanese training ship, (was it Nippon Maru?), ghosting up the Strait.

We weren't around for some of the earlier craft. The Haidas, if they raided this far south, as they probably did, in their great war canoes, had gone out of that type of business before we came on the scene. The Greek navigator who may have, and probably didn't reach the mouth of the Strait called after his adopted Spanish name — Juan de Fuca — was a bit previous also.

★ ★ ★

And James Cook, who missed the passage in the "stinkinge fogge," had packed it in too soon for us. So had that great geographer, George Vancouver and his young assistant, Peter Puget, but their ships, "The Discovery" and others, and the personalities made place names hereabouts.

If a Royal Yacht has visited before, the event escapes my recollection.

So Monday's sail-past added just a little more to the lore of the Strait, a pleasant addition for those of us who watch from shore. I liked the CPR boat, heading for Seattle, in its flag dress, though what the signals meant, if they were signals, I don't know. And it was probably proper of the vessel to slow almost to a stop way south of Trial to take the flags down — going into American waters as it was.

As a sentimentalist, I was impressed and mildly grateful that the Britannia had made its appearance here, adding a glittering thread to the tapestry of Strait's history.

The small boys, paddling their crudely constructed log-raft in the bay, seemed briefly happy, also, with the show, probably endowing their own, awkward floating construction with imaginative trappings of Royal Yachtdom.

The brief glimpse of the regal passage ended for us beyond Clover Point, off which we'd seen the Beaver replica recently. The yacht club craft made their return journey home, under sail or power. The breeze fell, the chop went down.

By the shore rocks, two hen buffleheads paddled in sedate forage, unconcerned. A Royal Yacht and Royal Visit meant nothing to them. Yet these, or their successors, will go onward the same though dynasties pass — barring oil slicks, that is.

MUTUAL FUND ASSETS RISE 9 PER CENT

TORONTO (CP) — Assets of Canadian mutual funds rose nine per cent during the first three months of this year, the Canadian Mutual Funds Association says.

Total assets at March 31 were $2,586 million, up from $2,372 million at Dec. 31 last year.

The association said 54 per cent or $1,385 million of the funds' assets were invested in Canadian securities, while 41 per cent or $1,072 million were invested in foreign securities.

There were 762,996 shareholder accounts at the end of March, compared with 771,099 at the end of 1970.

Scandia-Noranda

Noranda Exploration Ltd. is drilling on the boundary of Mattagami, Que., property adjoining Scandia Mining and Exploration Ltd. claims which are under a three-year working option.

Scandia is planning detailed geochemical and geophysical surveys on its Mattagami-Quebec group, as soon as breakup permits. Similar work is planned for a second group at Sturgeon Lake, northwestern Ontario.

Esso

Esso Chemical Canada, an Imperial Oil Ltd. subsidiary, will improve and increase its ethylene production at Sarnia with a $1.5 million project.

Installation of a fifth gas cracker at the chemical plant is expected to raise ethylene output 10 per cent.

Engineering construction will be done by Catalytic Enterprises Ltd., of Sarnia, with field work beginning in the fall and completion due next spring.

Cream-Western

Cream Silver Mines Ltd. has reached agreement with Western Mines Ltd. for exploration of its Buttle Lake property, lying about two miles south of the Lynx mine operated by Western.

For a firm outlay of $135,000 and optional payment of $680,000, Western has the right to form a new company in which it may have 70 per cent interest.

Cream will make available immediately 50,000 of its shares at 50 cents each; in addition it has received a $10,000 cash payment. Western is to spend $50,000 this year, $50,000 next year and optional amounts to 1975.

The property, on which work is to start shortly, is thought to be an extension of the Western mineral zone.

Neonex

Net earnings of $1.84 million (27 cents a share) before extraordinary items wre less than half the earnings of 1969, reports Nenoex International Ltd., of Vancouver.

The company had $4.56 million (68 cents) in earnings in 1969, when results of subsidiaries were better. One of these, Imbrex Ltd. wholesale carpet distributor, accounted for 23 cents of the decline. Its pre-tax loss was more than $3 million vs. a $165,000 profit in 1969.

Neonex had sales of $159.64 million vs. $159.3 million, but also reports an extraordinary loss of more than $8 million, of which $6 million was a write-down on its Maple Leaf Mills investment. The company is selling its half-interest in Bigelow Canada Ltd. to its U.S. partner Bigelow Sanford Inc.

Brenda

Brenda Mines Ltd. had net earnings of $556,000 or 12.9 cents a share in the first quarter of this year.

Earnings came from production valued at $4 million and after provision for $1 million interest, provincial mining tax at $67,000, depreciation of $849,000 and amortization of $1.6 million.

In its first nine months of commercial production to Dec. 31, 1970, Brenda had net earnings of $2.74 million or 65 cents a share.

Woodwards

First-quarter sales are up 12.1 per cent and higher profits are foreseen, reports C. N. Woodward, chairman of Woodward Stores Ltd.

The rise follows what Woodwards called the lowest year in sales increase and the first year of profit decline in 10 years.

As previously reported, the department store chain had profit of $7.3 million ($1.12 a share) on sales of $291 million, a record despite the small rate of increase. Profit in the previous year was $1.14 a share.

IU Corp.

International Utilities Corp. set new highs in revenues, in net operating income, and in per share earnings from operations in the first quarter.

Operating income for the quarter rose 33 per cent to $12.2 million from $9.2 million. Earnings per share from operations increased 29 per cent, to 85 cents.

Revenues for the first quarter were $230 million, a 13 per cent gain from $203 million the previous year.

Ranger

The earnings, on an operating gross of $503,941, included $152,318 from operations and $44,811 from investments.

BCFP

Most of Cattermole-Trethewey company's forestry operations have been acquired by B.C. Forest Products Ltd., including several logging divisions, Douglas plywood plant on Annacis Island, Nalos lumber mill in False Creek and a planing mill at Clinton.

Purchase price was not disclosed by B.C. Forest, which said the buy was primarily to strengthen wood supply position. Logging areas are situated from Harrison Lake to the Queen Charlottes, and in the Interior between Clinton and Williams Lake.

Cattermole Timber Ltd.'s interests near Hope, Finlay Forest Industries Ltd. at Mackenzie and Cattermole construction interests are not involved in the deal.

Selkirk

Quarterly results of Selkirk Holdings Ltd. show three times the net income at $244,827 (12.17 cents a share) based on gross operating revenue of $3.9 million, compared with earnings of $82,600 (7.76 cents) and $1.68 million income in 1970.

Operating expenses were more than twice the level of year ago, for a total $3.19 million.

There was a working capital deficiency at March 31 of $619,457 compared with working capital of $1.13 million year earlier.

In the period, 74,800 class A shares were issued to acquire full ownership of Island Broadcasting Co. Ltd., operating CJVI in Victoria; full ownership of Edmonton Broadcasting Co. Ltd. (CJCA) and Calgary Broadcasting Ltd. (CFAC), and a further 25 per cent interest in Greater Winnipeg Cablevision Ltd., for a half interest.

BP Oil

BP Oil and Gas Ltd. reports net earnings of $2.220 million or 8.1 cents a share for the first quarter compared with $1.48 million or 7.6 cents a share for the first three months of 1970.

The number of shares issued at the end of the first quarter of this year was about 27.3 million, up from 19.5 million at the end of March, 1970.

Placer

Placer Development Ltd. reports a sharp drop in earnings for the first quarter of 1971.

President Thomas McClelland told Placer's annual meeting first-quarter earnings were $864,000, compared with almost $2.5 million in the first quarter of 1970.

But McClelland said he expects an improvement in market conditions for copper and molybdenum.

Arctic Pipeline Tests Start

CALGARY (CP) — The Northwest Project Study Group has announced that its $3.4 million Arctic test facility has begun full operation on the Mackenzie River 65 miles north of Norman Wells, N.W.T.

The test project is part of a $12 million feasibility study into a proposed 2,500-mile, 48-inch diameter pipeline from Alaska's north slope to the United States. It would extend from Alaska through northeastern Alberta to the U.S. border near Emerson, Man.

The study's main objective is to determine the adequacy of gas supply and the economics of the investment with a view toward completing the pipeline during 1976.

SECTIONS BURIED

Participants are Atlantic Richfield Co., Humble Oil and Refining Co., The Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), TransCanada Pipeline Ltd., Michigan Wisconsin Pipe Line Co., and Natural Gas Pipeline Co. of America.

The Arctic facility is testing buried sections of 48-inch diameter pipe to determine effects of various operating conditions.

Four sections of pipe buried at different depths and with various surface cover allow observation of the effects on permafrost and surface drainage.

Other studies will determine optimum procedures for building through muskeg and mountainous areas without disrupting the environment.

Decision Near on U.S. No-Fault Insurance

By MORTON MINTZ
The Washington Post

The U.S. Congress is heading toward a day of decision on an automobile insurance system that collects $14 billion a year but pays out to claimants and policy holders a net of $7 billion or 50 cents on the dollar.

The system is a consumer issue with a potential for vast impacts on more than 100 million car owners and on the safety and repairability of the vehicles the auto industry will design for them hereafter.

But it is also an issue with a potential for drastic restructuring of the insurance business, which deducts $6 billion from the $14 billion in premiums for selling and other administrative expenses and for profit.

The legal profession's stake is also measurable. For litigating personal-injury and property-damage cases lawyers get $1 billion, or reform advocates estimate, about one-quarter of their total income.

A U.S. House commerce subcommittee headed by Rep. John E. Moss (D—Calif.) has completed eight days of hearings on his bills for no-fault insurance, under which a motorist's own insurer compensates him for specified injuries and losses no matter who — if anyone — was responsible for an accident.

This week the Senate commerce committee will begin a 10-day hearing on the similar, pioneer no-fault bills and related legislation co-sponsored by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson (D—Wash.), the committee chairman, and Sen. Philip A. Hart (D—Mich.), chairman of the Senate anti-trust subcommittee.

Magnuson and Hart, in a March hearing, attacked the White House position, which is that the present system "needs change badly, and needs it now," but that Congress should enact a resolution appealing to each of the states to adopt a no-fault plan.

However, under questioning by Moss, Secretary of Transportation John Volpe said he did not object to a law setting federal standards for the states to meet, so long as there would be no federal "take-over" of regulation.

But two experienced state legislators from Illinois and Massachusetts testified that the administration approach is doomed to fail.

Anthony Scariano, of Chicago, said that to suggest that state legislatures substantially controlled lawyers and insurance agents who thrive under the present system enact genuine no-fault plans is to play "a cruel hoax on the long-suffering auto accident policy-holder and potential victim."

Scariano gave the House subcommittee data on the legislatures of 10 selected states — California, Florida, Illinois, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and Texas — for 1969 which showed:

● That lawyers headed 16 of the total of 20 state senate and house committees with jurisdiction over no-fault bills (an insurance agent heads another).

● That only Michigan had neither a house nor a senate subcommittee with such jurisdiction that was not controlled by lawyers and insurance agents.

Scariano, joined by five other members of the Illinois house, sponsored a no-fault bill in 1967. It died in committee. In 1969 he tried again. Lawyer-legislators asked him, he said, "What are you trying to do? Repeal our livelihood?"

In the Massachusetts house Michael S. Dukakis led a long battle for a no-fault plan. Last year an extremely restricted version was adopted. Even so, motorists in his state are being saved an estimated $100 million in premiums this year alone.

Before Moss, Dukakis protested any proposal to let the states act "in their own sweet time," Volpe conceded to the congressman that after the first state enacted a workmen's compensation law, the last did not do so until three decades later).

The "guaranteed" result, Dukakis testified, will be a "crazy quilt" or state laws that will wrap motorists in different rules whenever they leave their home states.

Almost no one any longer even bothers to offer a defence of a system that in 1967, according to a massive department of transportation study, paid out $6.5 billion for losses that were actually $4 billion greater; gave an average permanently and totally disabled accident victim liability payments of $12,556 for an average total economic loss of $78,000 and often overpaid small claims — all while denying coverage, or charging discriminatory rates, to the unlucky.

Six Trials Ordered

VANCOUVER (CP) — Six separate trials were ordered in provincial court Monday in theft and fraud charges against John Van Luven Jr., son of the president of the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Van Luven Jr. faces six counts of forgery and four counts of theft involving a total of more than $6,000. He has pleaded not guilty.

Provincial court Judge William Selbie rejected a request for the trials to be held simultaneously and one case began Monday. Defence counsel Sam Toy said it would be prejudicial to Van Luven Jr. to hold trials at the same time.

Blast Kills 5

PORTO ALEGRE, Brazil (Reuter) — At least five persons were killed and 57 injured in an explosion at a fireworks store here, police sources said.

GALLUP POLL

Voters Volatile Over Past Year

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Over the past year, sharp dips and rises in favor for the federal political parties have been unique in the Gallup Poll's record of voting intentions, revealing a very volatile mood in the electorate.

Today, for instance, the Liberals stand at 42 per cent. This puts them back near their low point as reported last April. It is a big drop from their high point, revealed in December just after the FLQ crisis, when they reached 59 per cent.

Ratings for the Conservative party have remained fairly stable during the past twelve months. Today they are at 28 per cent, close to their year's high in October last.

The NDP at today's level of 23 per cent is at its high point during the same period.

Regionally, in today's report, Liberals have lost ground throughout the country in the past weeks, particularly in the west, where their losses have gone mainly to the NDP. Conservatives have gained favor in Ontario, perhaps as a result of the leadership convention, and have remained at comparable levels elsewhere. Quebec has changed very little in its voting patterns recently.

These findings are based on the regular surveys of party strengths conducted across Canada by the Institute, in which a cross-section of voters is asked the question:

"If a federal election were held today, which party's candidate do you think you would vote for?"

Starting with April last, the record is perhaps best shown in these tables in which the highs and lows for the period are indicated by (H) and (L) for the three main parties. Students of public opinion who know that on most issues, it is a slow moving tide, will realize that the changes are abnormally high.

Ney Scores Dumping Of Ferry Sewage

NANAIMO — Mayor Frank Ney has protested the dumping of raw sewage into Departure Bay by B.C. Ferries.

Ney said he had written to Highways Minister Wesley Black and ferries manager Monty Aldous complaining about the dumping and asking for a policy review.

The mayor, who is also an MLA, noted he had twice raised the sewage release problem in the legislature.

The mayor's action follows a demand by the Nanaimo and District Fish and Game Protective Association for the ferries to be equipped by small holding tanks for the raw sewage.

The sewage would be discharged in the open gulf where the volume of water would dilute the sewage.

The association said "it was incredible a government corporation is allowed to contaminate the waters that Nanaimo residents are to be called on to clean up through the spending of millions on new sewage collection and treatment."

ENVOYS GOING TO EUROPE, OTTAWA

Pakistan Trying to Woo West Sympathy

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

LONDON (AP) — The Pakistani government has sent a trio of special envoys to sell its version of the civil war in East Pakistan to governments in Europe and the Western Hemisphere.

The line they're trying to put across, in London, at least, is that India is to blame for the rebellion in East Pakistan.

Senior diplomats reported today that former president Mohammad Ayub Khan, who turned the presidency over to Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan two years ago, is the emissary to Canada and the United States. He is ostensibly going to Cleveland for medical attention but information here disclosed that he will also see officials in Ottawa and Washington in an attempt to rally their understanding and sympathy in Yahya's policy.

The envoy to Europe is former foreign minister Arshad Hussain, who saw Prime Minister Edward Heath in London last week. Hussain charged that India instigated Sheik Mujibur Rahman, the leader of the Bengali nationalist movement in East Pakistan.

He also claimed that West Pakistani forces had restored control in the eastern sector. Informed sources reported that, in response to questions about the entry of international relief teams, Hussain insisted Yahya's government would tolerate no outside intervention.

Hussain went on to Paris and Moscow. The Soviet Union has become increasingly critical of Yahya's offensive against the rebels.

Informants reported a third Pakistani envoy went quietly to China in the last week. They were unable to identify him. There have been press reports that Pakistan is talking with China about additional economic and military aid, and the commander of the Pakistani air force's staff college has been visiting Peking with a group of instructors and cadets.

The United States, Britain, the Soviet Union and China all have been helping the Pakistani government, and none wants to diminish its influence. But public opinion, at least in Western countries, has become increasingly agitated at the continuation of bloodshed, often through the use of Western weapons.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Canadian Commons Tuesday that Canadian officials are in East Pakistan to assess the latest situation with the aim of contributing relief assistance. Canada has contributed funds for medical assistance to refugees who have fled East Pakistan.

Bear Census Taken At Garbage Dumps

By ED WALTERS

ST. JOHN'N, Nfld. (CP) — Biologists have found that the best way to conduct their first comprehensive study of Newfoundland's black bears is to lie in wait at town and park dumps.

With the bears and newborn cubs emerging from winter dens this spring, a crew from the Newfoundland wildlife service is preparing for the third season of trapping, drugging, tagging and examining the animals known to scientists as Ursus americanus hamiltoni.

Among other things, the biologists have learned that black bears, even when trapped, are more likely to try to escape from many than attack.

Generations of bears have learned that food is easily obtainable at community dumps. Bears feeding at the dump in Terra Nola National Park are an unscheduled tourist attraction.

Neil F. Payne, biologist in charge of the bear programn says one result of the study could be "an index of abundance."

CAN'T TAKE CENSUS

Mr. Payne says there is not much hope of an accurate census, but information collected by biologists and reports from hunters may eventually give some indication of ow many bears are in Newfoundland.

Despite more frequent sightings of bears by tourists and campers during the last couple of years, Mr. Payne does not believe the population of how many bears are in cantly.

"I think it's a case of more people being in the parks and woods, and more garbage being created."

Provincial parks, where garbage is incinerated daily, seldom were bothered by bears, but a number of "nuisance" visits were reported to biologists last year.

Servants Swell Crowds

Provincial government employees in a number of downtown offices reported for work as usual Tuesday—only to be told 30 minutes later to leave their buildings.

The move was part of a government plan developed last week but kept confidential until this morning.

A number of buildings in the vicinity of Heritage Court were cleared for security reasons. The Royal Family made a brief tour of the museum's main floor.

But employees there and elsewhere were told at 9 a.m. they were free for the morning and it was suggested they join the crowd for the legislature ceremony.

They were not told of the plan before Tuesday, apparently for fear many would not have come downtown for the ceremony had they known in advance they would have the morning off.

BUT RUSSIANS ACCELERATING PLANS

U.S. Space Program Slows Down

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — "Freedom 7 was just the first baby step, aiming for bigger and better things. One day man will land on the moon. He will establish space stations and he will go to Mars."

Alan B. Shepard made the prophecy shortly after he became the first United States spaceman 10 years ago, on May 5, 1961.

Shepard's first flight lasted only 15 minutes and took him and his Freedom 7 capsule only 116 miles high and only 302 miles down the Atlantic missile range. The moon, Mars and space stations seemed far away.

But a decade later six Americans, including Shepard, have landed on the moon and the Russians have tested the first elements of a space station with the recent Soyuz 10—Salute mission.

But, for the U.S. at least, manned flights to Mars are many years away. After overtaking an early Soviet lead to win the race to the moon, the U.S. space program is slowing down.

Unless Congress votes funds for future programs, the U.S. will end manned space flight for the foreseeable future in 1973.

ACCELERATING EFFORTS

Russia, meanwhile, is accelerating its space effort. Soviet scientists say they'll launch a fleet of space stations as orbiting laboratories for medical, scientific and engineering research. They will be used for earth resources survey and for military purposes.

Shepard—then a navy lieutenant-commander and recently selected for promotion to rear-admiral—recalls every minute of his first flight when a breathless nation riveted attention on his cramped capsule atop a slender Redstone rocket.

Only 23 days earlier, Russian cosmonaut Yuri A. Gagarin had become the first human to rocket away from earth, circling the globe once on a 108-minute mission.

Shepard devoted most of the suborbital flight to reporting instrument readings to Mission Control.

On landing he uttered the famous "Everything is A-OK!"

The United States won the moon prize July 20, 1969, when Apollo 11 astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin landed their lunar module Eagle on the lunar Sea of Tranquility.

Since then two other astronaut teams have landed on the moon. Shepard, after overcoming an ear disorder that grounded him several years, commanded the Apollo 14 flight earlier this year, landing in the moon's highlands.

LONDON—Two policemen awarded the British Empire Medal for bravery after capturing a gunman have received praise from an unexpected source—the convicted thief. Detective Constable Brendan Walsh, 28, and Constable Colin Jones, 30, said they received this message from William Reynolds, now serving a 10-year jail sentence: "All the best on your award. Hope there are no ill feelings."

WINNIPEG —An application for a reduction in beer prices has been filed with the Manitoba Liquor Control Commission. Ben Ginter, owner of Uncle Ben's Tartan Breweries Ltd., filed the application asking that the price of beer in Manitoba be reduced 30 cents from the present $3.05 for a case of 12 bottles. Frank Syms, commission chairman, said the application is under study by the commission and will be forwarded to the public utilities board later this week.

GINTER
. . . to start price war?

HULL — When it comes to pink buttocks and bare bodies, Alderman Rene Villeneuve sees red. "I know I'm wasting my time," he told council, "but I can't help denounce the filthy pictures shown in our cine-pigsties." "New-wave producers undress our poor little Quebec girls for all to see. The screen is covered with pairs of buttocks and naked bodies. I recognize my own impotence in the face of such diabolical forces. But I have to speak up." He has tried before without success to have Hull cinemas closed.

VANCOUVER — George Palluau's bid to sail to the Philippines to get married went glub Tuesday. He got a half mile out into English Bay when his converted 13-foot canoe began to sink. A coast guard cutter rescued the would-be adventurer and it was back to the drawing board. His financee, Erlynda Cases, a school teacher in the Philippines, is waiting for him, presumably not at the alter.

BELFAST — A British television reporter chose jail Tuesday rather than name an Irish Republican Army outlaw he had interviewed. Bernard Falk, 28-year-old reporter working for the BBC, dropped his appeal against a four-day prison sentence passed on him by magistrates' court. Falk said the strain of waiting for the appeal is too much for him.

LONDON — A piece of string that didn't burn saved Lady Beaverbrook, widow of the Canadian-born millionaire publisher, from death by bombing, Scotland Yard said Tuesday night. The string held back the trigger of a six-inch bomb found clamped to the exhaust pipe of her car. It was wound around the exhaust and designed to burn through when the pipe heated up. Chauffeur G. Schneider found the 6-inch metal cylinder packed with gunpowder linked to a battery and clipped to the exhaust. Lord Beaverbrook owned the mass-circulation London Daily Express, Sunday Express and Evening Standard newspapers. He died in 1964.

Greene's Aussie Talks Successful

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuter) — Energy Minister J. J. Greene of Canada said today his talks with Australian government officials and the mining industry have been "most successful."

Greene is on a 10-day visit to Australia at the head of a team of experts to discuss mutual prospects for the future of mineral and energy resources of the two countries.

He told a news conference he has invited Australia's national development minister, Reginald Swartz, to visit Canada within the next two months for further talks.

Greene said Canada and Australia have a great mutual interest in seeing that they achieved optimum price for their natural resources.

"Buyers are often strong and well co-ordinated," he said. "If sellers operate alone, they leave themselves rather at the mercy of the buyers."

It is in the mutual interest of both countries, he said, not to sell uranium too soon and too cheaply over the next five years.

"We both see a very good market for uranium emerging. There are a sufficient number of nuclear contracts and commitments to give a good market after the mid-1970s, but until then it is certainly a buyers' market."

CADETS SING

Sea shanties and traditional Canadian folk songs will be the fare when the newly-formed Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Rainbow's chorus perform at the Veterans Hospital Thursday at 7 p.m.

Rounding out the 20-voice group are cadets from the Admiral Rayner Navy League Cadet Corps.

The group was organized in January by Lieut. T. A. Dando. Lieut. George Ball is props manager and chorus director is Miss Frances Carter, music director of the Church of Our Lord.

U.S.-China Talk Hardens

By SPENCER DAVIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A hardening of official tone and attitude appears developing in Washington and Peking despite the goodwill generated during last month's visit of an American table tennis team to mainland China.

Although the visit brought hopes of warmer relations, the only thing heating up now is the rhetoric the two governments are applying to each other.

The New China news agency said Tuesday that state department spokesman Charles Bray used "gangster logic," tampered with history and "turned facts upside down" in saying the legal status of Formosa or Nationalist China is unsettled.

Declaring the Chinese people will never permit the U.S. government to plot a "two-China" or "one-China, one-Taiwan (Formosa)" solution, the agency added in a Peking radio broacast:

"When and how the Chinese people liberate Taiwan is entirely China's internal affair, and no foreign country whatsoever has any right to interfere."

Meanwhile, Assistant State Secretary Marshal Green told a congressional committee on foreign aid:

"We are faced with a mainland China which, whatever its latest welcome degree of seemingly greater flexibility in international affairs, has presumably not abandoned its basic objectives of greater dominance over free East Asian countries."

EUPHORIA THE WORD

Among some professional diplomats the word "euphoria" has cropped up to describe the rosy hopes for better U.S.-Chinese relations.

One high policy-maker said: "What we are saying is that we are realistic and not so euphoric as to think we can change their objectives. The assumption we have to go on is that they have not changed their objectives."

Peking jumped on Bray's statement that the United States has treaty commitments for defence of Formosa and the Pescadores Islands.

"This exposes more clearly the vicious intention of the Nixon administration to persist in its hostility toward the Chinese people in a vain attempt to perpetuate the forcible occupation of our territory Taiwan," said the Peking radio broadcast.

The heated exchanges from both Nationalist and Communist China and the U.S. reaction suggested Washington's adoption of a formula for keeping Formosa in the United Nations while the Peking regime also is seated will satisfy no one.

Mysterious Disease Kills French Oysters

LA ROCHE SUR YON, France (UPI) — Eighty to 100 per cent of this years crop of oysters are dying of a mysterious disease in their beds in the Atlantic off the Vendee region of northwest France, officials said recently.

They said the disaster was even more serious than in the Charente area in the Bay of Biscay to the south where oyster farmers reported up to 80 per cent dying from pollution of the sea.

Oysters in the Vendee region are worth about $2 million a year, officials said.

In the Charente area, oyster farmers already have ordered 50 tons of hardier Japanese oysters to reseed the beds.

They said they hoped the Japanese species would resist oyster illness more than Portuguese oysters which are traditional in the area.

KEEP IT HERE

So Let Lady Luck Work for Our Own

Under Section 179 of the Criminal Code of Canada I could be sent up the river for a two-year stretch should I admit that I've just purchased, at a price of $3, a ticket on the next Irish Hospitals' Sweepstake. So I deny it.

But if I had bought one I'd be tolerable mad, as I might be exactly four times each and every year, at the reminder of all those Canadian dollars — some guesses run as high as $200 million annually — that continue to leave our shores because of the hypocritical rejection of a perfectly logical, attractive idea.

There's not been a public opinion survey in the last 10 years that's shown less than 78 per cent Canadian support for the concept of a government-operated national lottery, yet politicians of every stripe, at every level, behave like spooked rabbits before a vocal opposition that comes almost entirely from within the religious organizations.

It is repeatedly said, for example, that hospitals in Canada could not rely on the financing that would come from such a source.

But no one who has ever seriously advocated a national Canadian lottery ever suggested that it be the sole source of revenue. In Ireland, itself, the 25 per cent of the Sweep take that goes into hospitals and medical research is simply an added bonanza that permits them to do a first-rate job that we do so badly. Anyone who has travelled in Ireland will have marvelled at the medical facilities. "Don't faint on a street corner in Connemara," you'll hear it said, "or they'll build a hospital around you before you come to."

It is repeatedly said — very often by socialist purists — that it's a dodge to take the responsibility from the well-to-do, either through taxes or charitable donations, and put it on the shoulders of the poor.

But the fact is that neither charity nor tax dollars do the job anywhere in this country. There is not a single, tax-supported hospital in Canada, so far as I know, that has enough beds. There's not a single agency within the charity-supported United Appeal that doesn't ask for less than it needs and doesn't get less than it asks.

Two hundred million bucks or half that or a quarter of it — and, remember, it's money we export with no more than an occasional token resistance — would be a dividend welcomed by every short-changed institution or service.

There are three shatter-proof arguments, in my view, that answer every objection.

The first is that we're in one already, whether we like it or not, and millions of Canadians are regularly buying tickets on the Irish and other foreign-originating lotteries. It is a point that was made in 1954 by the then Social Credit attorney-general, Robert Bonner, who had recommended to Ottawa that the Criminal Code be revised to legalize government-supervised lotteries "because a large, significant body of the public presently supports them." (Bonner went out on a limb with that recommendation and, when the Rev. Phil Gagiardi objected, the attorney-general took pains to dissociate his view from that of his party.)

Secondly, in a free enterprise economy that condones gambling at the race track or at your friendly stock-broker's shop or grain exchange or in merchandising contests or in fishing derbies or in the chance-taking of insurance or in automobile raffles, there are ready precedents, especially if the take can be used to combat some of the evils of the system.

Ireland is not alone in using such money to good advantage. Sweden, Switzerland, Austria, Mexico, France, Australia, New Zealand, even tiny Iceland, are among dozens of the nations of the world that matter-of-factly consider it a source of public revenue.

Finally, it's the opinion of a substantial, democratic majority of Canadians that a national lottery would be a harmless kind of fun in life, not to be confused with the perils of gambling and that the idle fantasy of a pot of gold is not, as the sweepstakes' opponents claim, a corrupting influence on the morals or the dedication to a constructive life by the average man. If it were a great many of my friends who regularly invest in the Irish would have long since gone down the path to hell. It seems yet another example of a certain tendency by organized religion to misunderstand the workings of human nature.

The church objection, traditionally, is that lotteries are a gamble offering inducements of something for nothing and that they would eventually become a substitute for voluntary philanthrophy, the assumption being that charity is still kissing sweet.

One well-known anti-lottery clergyman of our town put the case to me this way:

"Here is a tradesman making, let's say, $150 a week who manages to get along well on his earned income. Then one day he wins $1,000 on a $2 wager. He has suddenly taken $998 from society for which he has put nothing back. He has won over a month's income which cost him nothing in skill, service or goods. He has discovered what seems to be a short cut, a socially acceptable form of theft. Greed now enters the picture and he resolves to take advantage of every betting opportunity. He decides that a man is a fool to work so hard for so little and he begins to take his gambling more seriously. Gradually gambling becomes an obsession and society is burdened with yet another parasite or 'easy money' boy."

That may be a useful argument against horse-playing. It has no validity at all, it seems to me, as it applies to a government-run national lottery.

In a fast survey of these immediate precincts I find none of my law-breaking friends who ever buy more than a single ticket or who have anything more than a wistful hope that they'll be a winner. Everyone knows the Irish odds: one in a million for the big one, nine in a million for enough to retire on, one in 2,000 for anything. (All of these odds, by the way, are lengthened by the number of counterfeit tickets — you can tell if yours is a fake if the watermark has gone when you boil it in three parts of water to one part household soda — and by the large numbers that never reach the great, revolving drums at 13 Earlsfort Terrace, Dublin.)

It is all just a lark with an insignificant outlay, a kind of enjoyable, voluntary tax, and so the gambling greed is not triggered. A national lottery would launch a million dreams, but there's a wide distinction to be made between dreams and an obsession with something for nothing.

In my time I've interviewed a good many Irish winners. That periodic story is another argument for our own national sweep. Time after time the prize goes to put a boy or girl through university or to set up a small business or to pay off debts or to give an old couple a decent retirement.

Anne and the Whalers

Flying hair and rigid muscles of carved Indian whalers frame Princess Anne and deputy provincial secretary Lawrie Wallace Tuesday during brief tour of Provincial Museum's main floor exhibit. Thousands jammed vicinity of Heritage Court to see the Queen, Prince Philip and Anne pass after earlier formal welcome by Premier Bennett in front of the legislature.

ALDERMEN WANT STAFF CUTS

City Budget Up 19 Per Cent

Victoria council today began working over a record preliminary budget of $25,244,863, up 19 per cent from last year — with a potential tax increase of 7.92 mills.

Wages, salaries and employee benefits accounted for the greatest portion of the increase, officials said.

Accepting the new mill rate as is would mean a tax revenue increase of $1,528,827.

Discussion immediately turned to the failure of the city to reduce staff over the past year.

Although Mayor Courtney Haddock tried to avoid what he called discussion of "philosophy," several aldermen persisted, saying they wanted to attack the budget with a view to cutting staff along the way.

Little actual change was made in the budget during the first morning of a three-day session.

Comptroller Jim Bramley told council reductions would be possible, "but the largest portion of the increase results from wage increases that have been either granted or provided for and other factors not under the control of the city . . ."

Bramley also said the past record of substantial increases in non-tax revenues has changed and the city's income in this area will be "relatively small."

The budget increase as it now stands is $4,047,238.

The city will suffer a $23,100 loss in revenue from the province's grants in lieu of taxes because the Eric Martin Institute now comes under the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Bramley said the total effect of wage increases already granted this year and last is nine per cent.

General government expenses, up by almost $200,000 to an estimated $2,111,275.

Other major increases:

Fire department, up $95,230; police, up $133,698; courts, up $75,330; traffic and street lighting, up $54,895; public works, up $50,730; sanitation and waste removal, up $67,900; water distribution, up $104,875; parks, up $95,585; debts, $71,000; regional district contributions, up $19,975; special expenditures, up $145,080.

The net cost of welfare to the city is estimated at $1,059,120. This is $164,432 greater than last year's budgeted amount, but only $58,968 more than the actual amount spent.

Bramley said even with the decrease in the municipal share of welfare costs from 21 to 15 per cent in 1971, the rise in welfare demand results in an increase in the city's welfare cost.

At this morning's session, aldermen gave no hint of how much they want to reduce the mill rate.

The mill rate was steady at 39.3 between 1966 and 1969. It dropped to 37.5 last year and with the preliminary budget is set at 45.42. With the school and hospital levies added, the mill rate levied on Victorians would come to 77.83.

Discussion sharpened today when Ald. Peter Pollen said every department should be required to produce a work study showing exactly where each employee is used.

After Pollen was cut off by Haddock, Ald. Clyde Savage said he simply did not believe that staff cuts are not possible.

Hiring a planning consultant at a cost of $10,000 last month came under fire and it was suggested that the city should pool some of its stenographic help.

Newly-Overhauled Oriole Won't Sail in Swiftsure

HMCS Oriole has been "grounded."

For the first time since 1955 the navy's 91-foot ketch won't compete in the annual Swiftsure classic May 29.

Rear-Admiral Richard Leir, confirming an earlier Times story, said today the biggest yacht in the race will have to stay tied up for this one.

"Regretfully," said the admiral, "I have had to make the decision that Oriole will not be in the race this year. The problem is simply one of a shortage of qualified men to man her.

NEW DRAPES

"With all our commitments this year for the royal visit and the centennial programs, combined with the normal heavy summer reserve training load, we cannot spare the personnel to keep the ship in shape for racing.

"I must add that when the present refit is completed Oriole will be in good repair and, once the pressure of other commitments has been relieved, every consideration will be given to ways and means of again placing her in service."

Oriole's rigging has all been replaced, the ship rechromed and her 50-year-old steel hull brought back to her original beauty. She has new drapes and carpeting.

The admiral's decision dismayed the town's Oriole boosters.

Humphrey Golby, who through his commentaries on the race has earned the title of Mr. Swiftsure, said:

"She's part of the whole Swiftsure picture and should be out there. She is Swiftsure — win, lose or draw."

Another sailor questioned the lack of manpower:

"There are five navy boats in refit right now. Do you mean to tell me that they can't find enough men off them to man her?"

Another said the priorities were at fault:

"If they can find men to dress up and run around in the model of the Beaver they should find enough for Oriole."

Rehabilitation Plan Gets Ottawa Okay

Saanich has received senior government approval for a pilot project for rehabilitation of welfare recipients, it was announced today.

The project involves two groups of 10 men for three months. It includes off-work upgrading of education and on-job work — cleaning Colquitz Creek.

"The approval came yesterday and we are hopeful it will get under way quite quickly," said Mayor Hugh Curtis. "We're extremely pleased."

Costs are to be shared, with the total cost being about $40,000 and the Saanich share about $20,000 including equipment and materials.

Purpose of the project is rehabilitation with the idea of assisting people who have been on welfare for six months to three years.

arthur mayse

IN THE NOT-SO-MERRIE England of 1653, a gentle biographer who studied to be quiet published a book from which he plainly expected little in the way of recognition. As he explained in his preface, he had merely "made a recreation of his recreation," which happened to be fishing.

His name was Izaac Walton. The little book that ensures his immortality as long as rivers run is titled, The Compleat Angler. Today, more than three centuries after it first saw print, it remains fresh, bright and innocent as a May morning.

It's a rare spring when I don't dip into it for the reading pleasure it provides without conscious art or lofty pretensions.

The framework which Walton set up for his treatise is both sturdy and simple. A hunter, a falconer and a brother of the angle meet while trudging from London to the country. To lighten the journey, each makes a case for his sport.

Piscator the fisherman and you may be sure Father Izaak's face beams behind the alias — speaks so convincingly of the joys of angling that Venator the hunter yearns to learn a hitherto scorned art.

He becomes a scholar under Piscator-Walton's wholehearted tutelage, and they go fishing together.

The scholar is patient and receptive. He listens to a veritable torrent of discourse, both by the streamside and later while they wait out a shower beneath a handy tree.

"But come," says Piscator at long last, "now it hath done raining, let's stretch our legs a little in a gentle walk to the River, and try what interest our Angles will pay us for lending them so long to be used by the Trouts. . . ."

Venator: Oh me, a fish, a fish, oh alas Master, I have lost her.

Piscator: I marry Sir, that was a good fish indeed; if I had had the luck to have taken up that Rod, then 'tis twenty to one he should not have broke my line by running to the rods end as you suffered him; I would have held him within the bent of my Rod. . . .

And so on, veteran to beginner, who charitably forebears to mention that his teacher did that same morning manage to lose a trout that broke all.

Their rods, heavy and long, were a far remove from the vibrant wands available to present anglers. They had no reels to hold their lines of plaited horsehair, although Walton had heard of these new-fangled winches.

And even though his instruction touches on artificial flies, he was much more adept in the use of the baits and lures he recommended to his scholar.

His young real-life friend, Charles Cotton — different from Walton in all respects save kindliness and love of angling — supplied knowledgeable chapters on fly-fishing to be included in a later edition of the book. It speaks for the quality of their friendship that he did so in such a way as to enhance rather than detract from Walton's reputation.

It is worth noting, too, that Walton continued to tinker with his book. Well-received from the start, it grew with the years.

The work as we find it is a compendium of songs, godly preachments, recipes, and natural history notes recorded from shrewd observation or quoted from not always reliable authorities.

But Walton is at his best when he returns his thoughts to running water and the fishes that inhabit it.

"Trust me, Scholar," he declares, "I have caught many a Trout in a particular Meadow, that the very shape and the enamell'd color of him hath been such as hath joyed me to look on him; and I have with much pleasure concluded with Solomon, everything is beautiful in his season."

The Compleat Angler, though an enduring classic, isn't to everyone's taste. You may find it tedious through much of its length. I've been told by more than one who attempted it that it bored him stiff.

But try it! You might discover in Izaak Walton a fine companion for a springtime ramble.

Hawks Win in Overtime After Goalkeeping Duel

BILL WALKER

Reg Midgely speaks for the crowd that is firmly convinced it has "the only game in town." And the turnout of 4,466 at Western Speedway last Saturday night does nothing whatsoever to dispute this boast. Rather, it fortifies the contention that Auto Racing is No. 1.

This was the first super-stock car race of the new season, and the suburban plant was bulging. A fitting tribute, perhaps, to its coming of age. For this is the 21st season at Western, and right now it has all the earmarks of being one of the most successful.

There were 4,100 fans at opening night to go with last week's overflow, and if Saturday's house was predominantly sub-teen, and young adult, that's part of the selling point.

"We appeal to the family," said Midgely, who doubles as track manager and promoter. "In some groups there may be four or five children. Those under 12 get in free," he explained.

But while the place is often filled — "Sundays are usually a dead loss," said Midgely — every year isn't exactly an instant financial success. "We do have a hard time making any money."

"Our gross gate runs between $125,000 and $150,000 a year," he revealed. "In 1967 our total attendance was 102,000. The last three years we have hit around 98,000. This works out to an average of 2,500 an event.

The problem with breaking even comes from the usual factors. Track maintenance is high — $5,000 was spent on the grandstand this year for a total of $30,000 on improvements in the last four years. Spilled gas rots the track, too, and if cement isn't brushed into the area within a day of the race, the black top just disintegrates, Midgely said.

●

The drivers for their part usually share on a percentage. Normally that works out to about 40 to 45 per cent of the gate.

And what's it worth to a winner?

Gary Kershaw got $375 on Saturday. The main event was worth $300.

It doesn't seem like much, considering the high expense involved, but then racing can be called a participation sport as well. For every driver there are five or six men behind him in the pits, or paying the bills. Even the wives have an organization.

For a major event, such as the ELSCAN competition, which will be held here in June, the money situation is different and better. Major drivers won't come here for peanuts. For example the guarantee for the two-day event is $3,000 or 40 per cent of the gate whichever is greater.

The glamor cars are the super-stocks. The current glamor boy is Gary Kershaw. Kershaw last January earned a rare distinction that has escaped all other Canadians. He won the Permatex 200 at Riverside, Calif. It was the first such stock-car honor to be taken by a driver from outside the U.S.

Last Saturday, Kershaw was matched against the best in the northwest — Hershel McGriff of Portland. And if Hershel couldn't do it, alone he brought along his son, Doug to supply the one-two punch.

Sure enough, the program wasn't minutes old before son Doug had cracked the track record in the qualifying heat. Then it was father's turn. The crowd was still filing in at the track announcer said: "Another new track record by Hershel McGriff."

Now it was up to Kershaw. Recently acclaimed as Victoria's male athlete of the year, he wasn't about to muff his lines. By four-one hundredths of a second he was quicker around the four-tenths of a mile oval than the senior McGriff. In distance, that's five feet.

It became almost a super night for Gary later when he won the main event. But really he was a trifle fortunate that he was still around at the finish. He had come from 19th to first, after the inverted start, and was leading the field when, on the 24th lap, it happened.

●

As he throttled down for the east turn, steam suddenly poured from his engine. Kershaw quickly pulled over. The race was halted. The red flag was out.

"Kershaw has blown his engine," intoned the announcer.

"Gee, that'll cost him $2,000," a spectator muttered.

But wait. While the track crew brushed dry cement onto the slippery part of the racing surface where Kershaw had come apart — "It absorbs the moisture," Midgely explained — Kerhaw's crew was hard at work. It wasn't a blown engine after all. It was just a busted radiator hose. Kershaw was back in the race before the mopping-up was over.

He was on the lead, too, a favor he won't get again. For last night officials changed the rules. No longer will a driver who causes a stoppage be alowed to retain his position. He'll go to the end of the line. The far end.

Which is only fair. At least Joe Macmurchie should agree. For of all the drivers in Saturday's main, he was the only one not lapped by Kershaw at the finish.

This is significant too, as Macmurchie last season crewed for Kershaw.

Now, he is saying in effect.

Pappin Fires Winner In Opener of Cup Final

CHICAGO (CP)—No one could blame Billy Reay today if he asks the National Hockey League to follow a suggestion he made in jest.

"Maybe the NHL should adopt a rule to award a point for a tie game in the playoffs," Reay, Chicago Black Hawks coach, said Tuesday night after his club beat Montreal Canadiens 2-1 on Jim Pappin's goal at 1:11 of the second overtime period.

The victory gave the Hawks a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final. The second game here is scheduled Thursday.

Chicago now has gone into overtime in four of its last six games.

"If we only played 60 minutes in a playoff game now, I wouldn't feel like we had a game," Reay said.

The limited scoring in just over four periods of end-to-end hockey was due mainly to the excellent goaltending of Chicago's Tony Esposito and young Ken Dryden of Montreal.

Jacques Lemaire put Montreal ahead at 12:29 of the middle period, with Chicago's Eric Nesterenko serving a tripping penalty. But Bobby Hull got the equalizer at 7:54 of the third with Lemaire off for interference.

It was Hull's ninth goal of the playoffs with assists going to Pappin and defenceman Pat Stapleton.

Stapleton's assist brought his playoff total to 13 this season, tying a record for defencemen held by Tim Horton of New York Rangers.

Reay said he thought his club was a little flat in the second period, but rebounded in the third and overtime periods.

Pappin Gives Mikita Credit

Pappin, whose only previous record on an NHL overtime scoresheet was a 1967 assist on Bob Pulford's goal against Montreal while he played with Toronto Maple Leafs, said Mikita was instrumental in the winning goal.

"Stanley did all the work on it," Pappin said. "It was my first goal into an empty net."

He said Dryden had moved to the side to cover the play from Mikita, but the Chicago centre still managed to get the puck to his winger.

WAS ROBBED EARLIER

Pappin said his goal was justice in a way as Dryden had robbed him late in the third period of a goal that would have given the Hawks a win in regulation time.

"I was surprised when he stopped that one," Pappin said.

"He just stood his ground and I think I hit him on the shoulder."

"He's a real good goalie," Hull said. "I'll tell you one thing, he doesn't make many mistakes."

Dryden said of Pappin's winning goal:

"I was watching the shot that hit the defenceman, then I was watching Mikita. He had the puck seven or eight feet in front and was alone.

"I didn't see Pappin at all.

"As soon as Mikita passed it, I sprawled, but it was much too late."

Esposito sat sullenly in his cubicle in the Chicago dressing-room slowly unwinding from the tension. He nursed a red welt on his right collarbone from a stop he made on Montreal's Frank Mahovlich.

Asked if he was particularly tired, considering the time he had logged in Chicago's 12 play-off games, Esposito said he felt every player on both clubs was spent by the end-to-end pace.

COACH NOT DISHEARTENED

Montreal coach Al MacNeil said the Canadiens were "not disheartened by the loss."

"We're sorry we lost, because we've got to get one game here," MacNeil said. "But overtime is one big play, one mistake by one side and it's all over."

Reay said he used rookie defenceman Rick Foley, up from the champion Portland Buckaroos of the Western Hockey League, as a replacement for veteran Doug Jarrett after the second period because the latter was "jaded."

"He's tired from all the overtimes we've had," Reay said of Jarrett. "But he'll snap back."

Thursday night's second game could see the return of centre Pit Martin to the Chicago lineup. He sat out Tuesday night's contest with a knee injury.

The Canadiens, losing their first overtime game after winning seven straight extra-period games, were expected to skate after the Chicago club.

Referee Bill Friday called 11 minor penalties, six to Montreal. Each team was assessed a minor in the first overtime period, both times as defencemen took out opposing forwards as they broke in on goal.

DIVIDED ATTENTION

Attention of Montreal clubmates was divided on this play during opening game of Stanley Cup hockey final Tuesday night in Chicago. While goaltender Ken Dryden deflects puck wide of net, defenceman Jacques Laperriere (2) bounces Black Hawk forward Jim Pappin (8) away from goalmouth. Pappin later became Chicago hero by scoring in second overtime period to give Hawks 2-1 triumph over Canadiens. Second game of series is scheduled Thursday. (AP Wirephoto)

JOHNSON GETS SALARY BOOST

BOSTON (AP) Boston Bruins announced Tuesday that Tom Johnson, who coached the team to the 1970-71 National Hockey League East Division title and its first Prince of Wales trophy in 30 years, has signed a new two-year contract.

Terms were not disclosed, but general manager Milt Schmidt said Johnson received a substantial raise.

Wirtanen Sparkles in Nets As Rocks Bounce Burrards

Victoria Shamrocks will be trying to make it two straight over Vancouver Burrards as the Western Lacrosse Association clubs clash again in the second game of the regular schedule tonight in Memorial Arena.

Goalkeeper Dave Wirtanen and forwards Ivan Thompson and Mike Beaulac helped the Irish open the WLA season on the right footing Tuesday night with a 15-12 victory over host Vancouver Burrards.

Approximately 500 Vancouver fans watched Wirtanen, who proved outstanding in the Irish nets during their lone pre-season exhibition victory over Coquitlam Adanacs, parry 41 shots in another great effort. He made 18 stops in the third period as Vancouver pressed for the equalizer.

Vancouver outshot Victoria 53-47 overall and 20-12 in the final 20 minutes.

Thompson, who recorded an outstanding junior year in Ontario before coming to Victoria during the off season, notched three goals and assisted on two others during his first regular WLA start.

ACTION HALTED

Ross McDonald paced Vancouver with three goals while Brent Ojanen (2), Bob Salt (2), Gord Fredrickson (2), Dave Litzenberger, Brian Davidson and Brian Bergum also scored.

Shamrocks were trailing 4-3 when the first period was stopped two minutes and 56 seconds early for Vancouver goalie Don Hamilton to repair his mask following a blistering shot by Dhillon. The Victoria crew then sprang back to lead 5-4 by the end of the frame and was never headed after taking a 9-8 lead midway through the second period.

Only Frank Alexander, who was scheduled to undergo minor surgery today, will be missing from the Shamrocks' lineup tonight. Bill Spotswood is slated to replace his clubmate on a forward line.

Game time is 8 p.m.

Ali Offered One Million

BOSTON (AP) — Boxing promoter Sam Silverman says he has offered Muhammad Ali $1 million or 35 per cent of the live gate and ancillary rights to fight 1968 Olympic heavyweight champion George Foreman in Boston in September.

Ali, formerly known as Cassius Clay, suffered the only loss of his career in his last fight when he was outpointed by Joe Frazier in their showdown for the world title.

Foreman, 22, ranked as the No. 1 contender by the World Boxing Association, is unbeaten in 24 pro fights, with 24 knockouts. His next appearance will be in a 15-round bout with Gregorio Peralta of Argentina in Oakland Monday night.

Bate Crew Extends Win Skein to Three

Two of the healthiest hits on the tally-sheet were the ones that counted most as Bate Construction nipped Seaboard Construction 2-1 for a third straight triumph in a Victoria Major Men's Softball League game Tuesday at Central Park.

Centre-fielder Ken Bate gave Bates an early lead with a two-out home run in the first inning.

Seaboard, hitless in the first four frames, mounted a threat when pitcher Glen Bullen singled in Jim Morgan to tie the score in the fifth frame.

Barry Jackson then stepped into the breach to relieve starting pitcher Bob Swanson and hold Seaboard hitless the remainder of the game finishing with five strikeouts.

Speaking of Eyes —Ted's Are Best

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (CP-AP) — The ice-blue eyes of Toronto quarterback Joe Theismann ranked with the most efficient in tests conducted recently among professional and amateur athletes.

William J. Beausay of the Bowling Green University education department is testing the efficiency of the eyes of drivers entered in the Indianapolis 500 here later this month.

The drivers are running a poor third to the collegians and the pros, partly, Beausay says, because they are considerably older on the average.

The tests show how fast the eye can shift from one dot to another, then back. A variation uses four dots.

Ted Williams, who had a phenomenal ability to see a pitched ball all the way to his bat, made the highest score of any athlete Beausay tested.

"An athlete may have 20-20 vision in both eyes and still score poorly in these tests," Beausay said.

"You are virtually blind when your eye is moving. It sees effectively when it stops. The tests show how quickly a person can move his eyes from object to object and how long it takes him to identify it."

New Favorite As Levanter Third by Six

CHESTER, England (Reuter) — Levanter, favorite for the Epsom Derby June 2, was decisively beaten in the Chester Vase horse race Tuesday and immediately lost his place in the Derby betting.

Linden Tree, ridden by Duncan Keith, held on gamely to win by a head in a photo-finish with Frascati. Levanter finished six lengths away, third of the five runners.

After the race, one leading London bookmaker installed Mill Reef as the new favorite for the Epsom Derby at 3 to 1, with Levanter and Linden Tree joint second favorites at 8 to 1.

Entry Deadline Set For Tennis Tourney

Entry deadline for the B.C. Festival of Sports and Victorian Days open tennis tournament is 7 p.m. Wednesday, May 19.

The week-long tourney begins May 22 and encompasses a full slate of senior (men's and women's) events in singles and doubles categories only as well as junior singles competition in four age groups—under-18, under-16, under-14 and under-12.

All contestants in the competition co-hosted by the Racquet Club of Victoria and the Oak Bay Tennis Club are limited to two events. Entry fee is $1 per event and the contest is open to all players on the lower end of Vancouver Island.

Courts at Carnavon Park and the University of Victoria will also be used for the racquet battles.

Entries may be sbmitted at the Racquet Club, Oak Bay Tennis Club, Hocking and Forbes Sporting Goods and Victoria Sporting Goods.

Gilmour Tops Century On Two-Inning Surge

Gilmour Construction lumped all hitting and all scoring into the fourth and fifth innings Tuesday to defeat Centruy Inn 7-5 in a Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's Softball League encounter at Heywood Avenue Park.

Shortstop Bob Walton led Gilmour batters by driving in two runs, one with a double in the four-run fourth inning and the other with a triple in the three-run fifth.

Centre-fielder Barney Spaven hit a double that brought home two runners in the three-run first inning and gave Century Inn a lead. But the Innkeepers could only manage two more runs, without benefit of a hit during the sixth inning.

FORMER PROS TO INSTRUCT AT WORKSHOP

Instruction will be handled by professionals from Washington State when the Victoria and District Baseball Association combines with the B.C. Amateur Baseball Association in staging a "workshop" Saturday at Lansdowne Junior High School.

Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. and the clinic, limited to coaches, managers and league executives, will run from 10 until 5 p.m. Lunch will be provided and gym shoes should be worn.

Instructors will be Dale Parker, former University of Washington coach, and ex-major leaguers Mal Walton and Harold Haddock. They may be joined by Al Ronning, a scout for Montreal Expos who was a catcher with Victoria in the former Western International League.

CREDITORS WERE GETTING . . . . . 'EVERY BIT OF HIS SALARY'

Flood Fouled Up Financially

MILWAUKEE (AP) —Curt Flood, Washington Senators outfielder, was near bankruptcy despite his annual $110,000 salary, Senators owner Bo Short said Tuesday night.

His creditors "were getting every bit of his salary," Short said. "He was really fouled up financially."

Flood jumped the American League team last week and went to Europe. The veteran had sat out a year of baseball after filing a suit in federal court against baseball's reserve clause.

An early-season starter for the Senators, Flood had been benched for lack of hitting when he left the United States.

A letter Flood left behind said he was leaving the team because of personal problems.

Short said the problems basically were financial. The club owner said he had told Flood the best way out would have been to file for bankruptcy. However, Flood's attorneys dissuaded him.

"If he had claimed bankruptcy, they wouldn't have been able to touch his salary," Short said. "If he claims bankruptcy now, he would be able to straighten himself out."

A source close to the Washington team said Flood was paying alimony, support for his five children, and had lost money in some bad investments.

By The Associated Press

Minnesota tied New York Yankees on Rod Carew's home run with two out in the ninth inning Tuesday night and then beat them 6-5 on Him Holt's two-out homer in the 10th.

In another American League action, Baltimore Orioles trimmed California Angels 4-1, Boston Red Sox edged Chicago White Sox 4-3, Detroit Tigers nipped Oakland Athletics 6-5 and Milwaukee Brewers blanked Washington Senators 2-0.

Lindy McDaniel came out of the New York bullpen after the Yankees had struck for two runs in the top of the ninth to take a 5-4 lead. The veteran reliever got two quick outs before grooving a 1-2 pitch to Carew, who belted it into left centre field seats for his first homer of the season.

McDaniel retired the first two Minnesota batters in the 10th but Holt, who had entered the game as a late-inning defensive replacement, slammed a 1-0 delivery over the right field fence for his first 1971 homer.

PINIELLA ALSO HIT

Hargan was hurt after hitting Lou Piniella with a pitch and breaking the Kansas City outfielder's right thumb. Piniella is expected to be out for about three weeks.

Bruce Dal Canton scattered nine hits and received last-out relief help from Ted Abernathy as the Royals handed Hargan his fifth loss in as many decisions.

At Baltimore, Jim Palmer ran his pitching record to 5-0 with a seven-hitter as the Orioles breezed past California. Boog Powell doubled home two runs to pace the winners' attack.

HOME-RUN ROUTE

The victory kept the second-place Orioles one game behind Boston, East Division leaders, who broke a 3-3 tie with the White Sox on Phil Gagliano's bases-loaded pinch single in the seventh. Left fielder Carl Yastrzemski blunted a ninth-inning Chicago threat by nailing fleet Luis Alvarado at the plate on a single by pinch-hitter Rich McKinney.

Al Kaline drew a two-out walk in the ninth at Detroit, then raced home from first with the winning run as Jim Northup's single to right went through Reggie Jackson's legs for an error.

In the National League, San Diego Padres used the home-run route to get past Atlanta Braves, 3-2; New York Mets nipped Chicago Cubs, 2-1; St. Louis Cardinals whipped Philadelphia Phillies, 7-3; Los Angeles Dodgers blanked Cincinnati Reds, 2-0, and Pittsburgh Pirates trounced San Francisco Giants 10-2.

Nate Colbert and Clarence Gaston supplied the heroics for San Diego. Gaston delivered the game-tying home run, his second of the game, and Colbert followed with another for the winning marker. It was Gaston's fourth circuit blow and Colbert's seventh.

TRADED to Toronto Argonauts by Calgary Stampeders is Dave Cranmer (above), 1968 rookie-of-the-year in the Western Football Conference who returned to action last season after missing entire 1969 campaign because of injuries. In exchange for Cranmer, Stamps received playing rights to defensive-back Ron Arends and offensive-back Ray Lancaster, who is now at University of Ohio.

Reading Unlucky Loser; Preston Tops Division

LONDON (CP) — Preston North End defeated Rotherham United, 3-0, Tuesday night to overtake Fulham and finish champions of Division III in the English Soccer League.

Preston, which defeated Fulham on Saturday, finally topped them by one point in the standings with the win over Rotherham. Alan Spavin, with two goals, and Dick Heppolette scored for Preston.

A 2-1 defeat by Aston Villa doomed Reading to relegation to Division IV for the first time in the club's 100-year history.

UNLUCKY GOAL

An unlucky own goal by inside forward Terry Bell dropped Reading into Division IV. Bell's moment of misfortune came in the 65th minute — just seven minutes after Dick Habbin had equalized a first-minute goal for Villa by Willie Anderson.

Going down with Reading are Bury, Doncaster and Gillingham while teams elevated from Division IV to Division III are division champion Notts County, Bournemouth, Oldham and York.

At the foot of Division IV are Lincoln, Newport, Hartlepools and Barrow, which must all apply for reinstatement.

Dropped from Division I to Division II are Burnley and Blackpool while Leicester and Sheffield United move up to take their places.

Sixth Quarterback Acquired by Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions Tuesday announced the signing of quarterback Bob Naponic, bringing to six the number of signal callers attending the Lions training camp this season.

The 24-year-old Naponic spent last year with Houston Oilers, taxi squad and was activated for the last game of the season.

He is six feet tall and weighs 200 pounds and played college football for the University of Illinois before joining the Oilers.

The Lions have also announced the signing of a special assistant coach for the 1971 training camp. Paul Davis, currently the assistant head coach at Auburn University in Alabama, will fill the position.

Bakers Score 29 In Opening Game

Victoria McDonald's Bread, defending Western Canadian champion, opened the British Columbia Junior "B" Lacrosse League campaign in red-hot fashion Tuesday by trampling Port Coquitlam 29-7 at Memorial Arena.

Andy Reid scored five goals, Jimmy Lynch added three goals and four assists and Tom Levasseur counted one goal and five assists for the Victoria cause.

Boxla Plasterers Topple Teamsters

Victoria Plasterers slipped past Esquimalt Teamsters 8-6 at Esquimalt Sports Centre while E. J. Hunter defeated O.K. Tire 16-2 in a battle between two Saanich clubs at Pearkes Arena in season-opening games Tuesday in the South Vancouver Island Intermediate Lacrosse League.

Rick Sylvester scored four goals to lead Plasterers while Roger Hill added two and singles were chipped in by Brian Gibson and George Sprinkling.

E. J. Hunter was led by the four-goal production of Bruce Lubinich while Glen Crighton and Jim McCreesh neeted three apiece. Bob Cool (2), Don Patterson, Steve Cook, Mike Wilson and Glen Faust added the other tallies.

Bob Sproule Retains Post

Veteran Victoria sports official Bob Sproule has been re-appointed to another one-year term as British Columbia director for the 13-to-15-year division of the International Babe Ruth Baseball program.

Announcement of the extension of Sproule's term and praise for his past services came Tuesday from Babe Ruth headquarters in Trenton, New Jersey.

Sproule has been affiliated with the Babe Ruth program for the past 17 years and has been president of the Saanich Evening Optimist Babe Ruth League for 13 years.

He is also active in several other organizations, including the Victoria Minor Hockey Association, Victoria and District Baseball Association and the British Columbia Amateur Baseball Association.

Jockeys at Vancouver Threaten to Walk Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jockeys at Exhibition Park racetrack threatened Monday to walk out of the stables starting Friday unless their demand for a 10-per-cent pay increase is met by the owners.

The dispute threatens to shut down the three-week old racing season. Horse owners claim they cannot increase fees to the jockeys unless their own dispute with the track management is resolved.

The race meeting has proceeded without a contract between owners and the Jockey Club.

Management is believed unwilling to consider changing the fee structure since betting so far has been about 20 per cent off the 1970 handle.

B.C. TURF A WINNER

The company said in its annual report Tuesday net earnings rose to $133,209 or 13.9 cents a share for 1970, compared with $118,411 or 13.4 cents a share in 1969.

Strike by Riders Averted in Ontario

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — A threatened strike by Ontario jockeys that would have prevented thoroughbred racing here was averted Tuesday when jockeys and horsemen reached an agreement.

The jockeys said they would not accept mounts today unless fee increases, which the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association agreed to implement at the beginning of this season, were put into effect immediately.

After more than two hours of negotiating Tuesday, the jockeys agreed to finish out the spring meet under the old pay scale and the association agreed to put the new scale into effect May 14, when thoroughbred racing returns to Windsor for the first time in 36 years.

AUTOMATIC PAYOFF

In races with purses from $2,000 to $3,400, the breakdown for a second, third and also-ran mount will be $45, $35 and $30, respectively. For purses of $3,500 to $4,900 the breakdown will be $50, $40, and $30 and for purses $5,000 and up, $55, $45 and $35.

Under the present scale, a winning jockey receives $75 for a mount in races of $2,500 and under. Second, third and also-ran money is $45, $35 and $30. For purses of $2,500 and up the winner receives $100 with $50, $40 and $35 for second, third and also-rans.

The association previously refused to put the new scale into effect until it signed a new purse contract with the Jockey Club. The parties failed to agree at a meeting a week ago and will meet again next Tuesday.

MIDDLE EAST VISIT

Rogers' Diplomacy Shows Little Gain

CAIRO (AP) — U.S. State Secretary William Rogers talked with Egyptian officials again today, but neither Egypt nor Israel gave any indication of retreating from opposing conditions for reopening the Suez Canal.

At the midway point of his two-day visit to Cairo, Rogers met Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad and Premier Mahmoud Fawzi.

The secretary hopes his week-long peace mission to four Arab capitals and Israel will help unfreeze the deadlocked Arab-Israeli peace talks and produce some movement toward a Suez canal agreement as a step toward a peace settlement.

In proposing an agreement last month to reopen the canal, President Anwar Sadat of Egypt said Israeli forces must pull back from the east bank, and Egyptian troops would cross over to reoccupy the territory relinquished. Israel said it would agree to withdraw only if the Egyptians stayed on the west bank of the waterway.

POSITION RESTATED

Egyptian spokesmen in turn have repeatedly rejected any such prohibition on movement of their forces across the canal. And Israel's position was restated in Jerusalem Tuesday by Information Minister Israel Galili, who said his government demands "absolute assurance" that no Egyptian or Soviet troops would cross the canal, as well as "effective and agreed means" of supervising the execution of any agreement.

Arriving from Beirut Tuesday, Rogers said he was prepared "to explore with Egypt and Israel in a concrete way the possibility of an interim agreement of opening the Suez canal, which we hope would contribute to a final settlement."

Rogers then outlined his views to Riad in an hour-long meeting. An Egyptian spokesman ducked questions about what Riad thought of Rogers' ideas. He said Riad welcomed Rogers' trip and thought it would contribute to the cause of peace.

Rogers, the first secretary of state to visit Egypt in 18 years, presented a letter of friendship from President Nixon to President Sadat.

Hostess Program Set

OTTAWA (CP) — The immigration department has announced a hostess program at Toronto's Malton airport to ensure that immigrants receive assistance on their arrival. Each hostess, who is proficient in at least three languages, will introduce immigrants to essential federal programs and assist in completing immigration documents. There is a similar system in operation at Dorval airport in Montreal.

Former Resident Posted to Bahamas

Formerly of Esquimalt, Victor C. Moore, 53, has been appointed commissioner to the Bahamas and British Honduras.

The external affairs department, in making the announcement, said Moore would also retain his posting as Canada's high commissioner to Jamaica.

Dinner meetings of the Optimist Club of Victoria will be held at 6:30 p.m., tonight and May 12, at Holyrood House.

The Life Underwriters' Association of Victoria will be host to a one-day conference of life insurance underwriters, Friday, at the University of Victoria.

B.C. News Briefs

Sale Delayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. said Tuesday it will hold up the sale of 224 acres of land its owns at the mouth of the Eagle River near Sicamous, rumoured to be the site of a proposed pulp mill. Company officials said they decided not to accept an offer of $125,000 from an undisclosed source and also denied the pulp mill speculation.

★ ★ ★

Tenants to Stay

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Tenants' Council announced Tuesday that 60 notices in buildings managed by Wall and Redekop Realty Ltd. have decided not to move and to withhold rent cheques again this month. Terry Haugian of the tenant's council said the 60 tenants unanimously agreed at a closed meeting to extend the boycott against Wall and Redekop in their rental dispute with the company.

★ ★ ★

Anonymous Donor

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver park board officials Tuesday announced an anonymous donor has offered the board $50,000 to build a children's open air swimming pool on the block of waterfront land adjacent to Stanley Park if the land is obtained by the city for park purposes. The property also is the proposed site of the controversial Four-Seasons apartment hotel complex.

★ ★ ★

Firehalls Planned

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council Tuesday approved a plan to build three new firehalls, in the downtown, west end and False Creek areas, at an estimated cost of $1.38 million. Fire chief Armand Konig said the three halls would take about 2½ years to complete.

Ease Computer Curbs, Gov't Told

By BOB DOUGLAS

OTTAWA (CP) — Government should apply only a minimum of regulation to the computer communications industry, says the man heading the federal study on that industry.

Dr. Hans Jacob von Baeyer, 59, emphasizes this is a personal view. His study group will be making recommendations in October or November to the communications department.

Resignation of Eric Kierans last week as communications minister, over differences on federal economic policy, has no bearing on the 18-month independent study.

The German-born scientist had a broad background in industry and government in Germany, Switzerland and Canada before his appointment to head the study last October.

The study will make recommendations on Canadian control of the industry and methods of ensuring the computer communications network meets the social and economic needs of Canada.

Dr. von Baeyer, a medium-sized man with thinning hair, took time recently to discuss some of the problems. Views are being gathered from the computer communications industry on the degree of government intervention needed as well as on likely future trends.

Dr. von Baeyer in an interview said that much of the actual processing of data is handed to U.S. firms by their Canadian subsidiaries.

CITES EXAMPLE

He pointed to Calgary where oil companies channel data about oil exploration to U.S. headquarters where computers digest the information and produce maps.

"That processing could just as well be done here."

But Dr. von Baeyer is against aggressive government action to compel these companies to do their data processing in Canada.

Some have suggested that information leaving Canada should be taxed. But the study head said he does not believe a tariff on information is feasible.

However, it was possible that gentle pressure on these firms could have some effect.

Dr. von Baeyer favors allowing the computer communications industry to regulate itself except for long-range planning, standardization, individual privacy and quality of performance.

To ensure that Canada maintains some control over its own data, Dr. von Baeyer suggests parallel data banks. U.S. firms would have to keep data in computers in Canada as well as the U.S.

This might lead to all Canadian data being kept in Canada because it would be more economic to have only one data bank, he said.

A separate study group including representatives of the main one and the communications and justice departments is looking into the question of privacy.

Privacy is affected by computers because they are far more efficient and rapid than conventional filing systems. They can provide information once buried in files.

BUILDING DOUBLES

In the first four months of this year, permits worth $2.9 million have been issued including 160 dwellings. In the corresponding period last year, permits were worth $1.7 million.

FALCONS WERE TRIED AT VICTORIA'S PAT BAY FIELD

$10M Spent on Anti-Bird Programs Near Airports

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — What have all these in common?

The highest monthly tides in Georgia Gulf. Population fluctuations of field mice in prairie areas, dew worms in the St. Lawrence valley, High grass heights in Ontario, low ones in the Maritimes.

They're all watched intently as indicators of an extra hazard for humans who go up into the sky in aircraft.

They are factors which encourage birds to congregate near airports, foraging in its fields, flying over or sitting on its runways, roosting along the fringes of its approach lanes.

CAN CAUSE CRASH

Occasionally the restless flocks can envelop an airfield with a constantly shifting, feathery curtain capable of snaring an airplane in its gossamer folds and bring it crashing to the ground.

That almost happened to a DC-8 which took off from Vancouver's Sea Island airport to carry 29 passengers to Tokyo a year ago Jan. 7.

A black "wet spot" on the runaway suddenly burst into the air as a flock of dunlin — a small type of sand piper — before the pilot could abort the take-off. No damage was indicated by the instrument panel as the jet swept through the light birds so the pilot continued the flight.

But the ground crew found almost 600 dunlin bodies on the runway. DC-8 engines are built to withstand strikes by one such small bird every 50 square inches, that's why the instruments were quiet, but a discussion between pilot and engineers on the ground resulted in a decision to play safe and return the jetliner to base.

DAMAGED FANS

Mechanics found that the repeated strikes had damaged fan blades in two of the engines so badly they would have conked out long before the plane got to Tokyo.

"Since then we have studied dunlin behavior and find they are most active on Vancouver airport at times of extreme high tide, once a month," explained Canadian Wildlife Service biologist Dr. Victor Solmon.

That's when the dunlins' favorite seaside beaches on Sea Island are covered, sending them inland to kill time at the airfield.

"Since we can forecast tides we can know when to arrange for special patrols to drive them off runways and reduce the problem," said Dr. Solmon who has had to figure out an endless number of solutions to particular problems at some 100 airfields in Canada and abroad where our air force and airlines operate.

DEW-WORMS

Dew-worms are a more irascible problem at Montreal's airport, attracting hundreds of birds, but research is seeking an answer. Grass at Toronto's airfield has to be kept cut below 4½ inches or else insect population explodes, bringing birds by the thousand. On the other hand, grass must be left at least six inches high at some Maritime fields because the seagull flocks don't like resting in tall grass.

Years when field mice thrive bring predator birds in alarming numbers to the Edmonton airfield so they have to be controlled.

Man-made attractions also have to be altered near airfields — building codes now discourage structures with eaves or flat roofs that hold water, for instance.

Although high-flying, heavy migrating birds are a more acute hazard to aircraft they are seasonal problems, but the resident local birds around airfields pose a semi-permanent problem. It is slowly being reduced, largely through ecological specifications formulated by Dr. Solmon for airport design and management.

STILL SEARCHING

"In the past six years the federal government has spent more than $10 million in alterations to airfields across the country to reduce the local bird problem by discouraging them from making them their home fields," he says. "But we still are searching for solutions all the time."

Vancouver's airport, where local birds have come closest to causing a major tragedy, is a model problem that has caused a great deal of head-scratching for ingenious ideas because it was built on a delta island in the centre of a natural bird habitat in the years of ignorance about such hazards.

"We've spent a lot of money there tearing down old cannery buildings along a channel near the airport and cutting out the numerous hedges and orchard trees on the island itself which had been roosting areas.

"That helped to send packing the pheasants which earlier had damaged some jet engines but there's lots of water on the island which also attracts birds.

DITCHES EMPTIED

"We've had to cross-wire drainage ditches so birds won't land there and also put in additional pumps to empty the ditches quickly after rains although we still have problems with sheets of water covering the soaked fields and attracting thousands of small birds at times.

"When the new terminal was put in, a great deal of earthwork was done — shaping ditch shoulders, removing an old market garden and that sort of thing — to discourage birds and of course we use runway patols and noisemakers to scare off the dunlins."

An experiment using falcons to frighten off local birds was partially successful at Victoria's Patricia Bay airport.

"It was great during daylight hours but of course the falcons weren't any good to us at night, in rainy or windy weather and you needed several trained handlers with a fairly large stable of falcons so it didn't prove economical for a DOT type of airfield.

FALCONS USED

"But for a field that is only used in daylight the falcon experiment proved itself and, as a matter of fact, led to its use in Europe. A naval air training field in Scotland, for instance, trained two ratings as falconers and they rely on them for handling local bird problems."

"A few years ago when Bing Crosby came to open the Calgary Stampede, the very next plane after his ran into a flock of birds at the airport and sustained almost $200,000 damage just in replacement of hardware," recalled Dr. Solmon.

So Calgary's proposed major airport renovation will include several anti-bird facets, particularly drainage and earthshaping to eliminate slough and favourite pot holes. New airports like the proposed second international field at Montreal not only have designed-in anti-bird features but locations are influenced by ornithological studies.

CONSULTANTS

"Our Canadian committee has given advice on airport specifications and locations to dozen countries in Europe. I've just come back from Sweden where I was consulted about the siting of a new field, for instance," said Dr. Solmon.

"We try to find general solutions, of course, such as current research to develop a green cover better than grass from the point of view of height maintenance and not harbouring insects and efforts to develop better techniques in scaring off birds with noise and such.

"But each airfield has a lot of specific and peculiar problems and they have to be tackled one by one. It's a tough process — but worth it."

All 19¢ pens are no longer created equal.

Introducing

The Eagle

From Eagle/North-Rite. And with our reputation for quality products, there's no way we'd bring out an ordinary pen. Not even for 19¢.

If you've written with 19¢ pens before, good. Now try the Eagle. It's so smooth, it virtually glides on paper.

More good news: it writes up to 50% longer than its best-known 19¢ competitor. By test. And down to the last bit of ink, it won't skip or blob. We put our most expensive ink in the Eagle. It's non-goop and ultra-smooth flowing. Because we didn't skimp, the Eagle performs like an expensive pen — instantly. What's more, we hand-test every Eagle pen to make sure its performance is perfect.

Most 19¢ pens look simply like sticks that write. We wouldn't settle for that kind of styling.

The Eagle has a solid-fitting cap with a secure lock-grip. There's a textured comfort-grip to help you write your best, plus a dependable clip that holds the Eagle securely in your pocket.

There are 4 new Eagle pens. Try your hand at them all.

New Party Surfaces

WINNIPEG (CP) — Further rumblings of a new political alignment in Manitoba to oust the governing New Democratic Party surfaced Tuesday, but the ideas received little encouragement from Opposition Leader Sidney Spivak.

The Conservative leader told reporters he does not like the idea of Liberals and Conservatives "ganging up" on the NDP, and knows of no move in the Conservative hierarchy to form a new party.

Donald Craik, a former Conservative cabinet minister said earlier Tuesday he had instructed the party constituency association in his riding of Riel to sound out possible support for a new party, composed primarily of Liberals, Conservatives and possibly Social Credit Supporters.

Albertans 'Spoiled'

EDMONTON (CP) — The manager of the Alberta Wildlife Foundation said that support for environmental education has been "pathetic" in Edmonton and Calgary because Albertans are spoiled.

Manager W. R. Morgan said the people of Edmonton and Calgary showed an astonishing lack of support to the foundation's current program of wildlife education films.

With 5,400 tickets available in two showings of these films in Calgary's Jubilee Auditorium, each showing drew only an average of 91 persons, he said in an interview. Edmonton's showing was only slightly better.

Tests Won't Change

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Highways Minister Joe Borowski Tuesday said his department has no intention of taking steps to provide that the written portion of the province's drivers' tests may be taken in a language other than English. Mr. Borowski made the comment in the legislature in response to questions from L. R. Sherman (PC—Fort Garry).

Rigid Zoning Hit

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Rigid municipal zoning by-laws contribute to the rapid deterioration of older neighborhoods by hampering intelligent redevelopment of property, Mayor Rod Sykes of Calgary said Tuesday.

He told a seminar on municipal and planning law many older areas of a city could become more economic and usable if redeveloped properly.

"We need to realize the need for a composite residential, one that will allow for compatible density differences, perhaps up to the range of volume that could be fitted into the envelope of a large two-storey house of the kind so popular some 40 or so years ago."

Decision Soon

BRANDON (CP) — A federal government decision on the future of the Rivers Air Base facilities may be announced within a month, supply and Services Minister James Richardson said.

He said he has learned a plan for another use of the base will go before the federal treasury board "either this week or next week, and following that I think it would go to cabinet not longer than two weeks from then.

"Hopefully within a month, and perhaps earlier we will be able to make an announcement," Richardson said in an interview.

Death Kiss Cited

EDMONTON (CP) — The Edmonton Cuncil of Railroad Unions said in a brief to federal transport officials that any move to integrate the two transcontinental passenger services could be "the kiss of death" to rail passenger service.

Contents of the brief, addressed to federal Transport Minister Don Jamieson, President J. W. Pickersgill of the Canadian Transport Commission and to several Western Canadian mayors and members of parliament, were released Tuesday.

HAIR-RAISING FIND MADE BY REPAIRMAN

LONDON (Reuter) — Gas man Arthur Young, 44, claims to have made a hair-raising discovery about the North Sea gas being piped ashore from deposits beneath the sea bed.

It makes hair grow, says Young, who is bald.

When he started repairing gas leaks in the new supply pipes he noticed hair at last emerging from his scalp.

"It's really incredible," said Young. "Long strands are sprouting up all over my head just like on a baby.

"With the old gas we usually found a lot of dead worms around the leaking pipes, but now they seem to be thriving. That is why I am convinced the gas has something to do with my new head of hair."

Advance Grain Aid Change Earns Praise From Opposition

By DAN TURNER

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition agriculture spokesmen gave the government a backhanded compliment in the Commons Tuesday—limited congratulations for bringing in amendments to the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act they said might undo some of the damage it has done to western farmers in the last few years.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) didn't have time to contribute to the guarded compliments, but offered more than his share of the assessment of the damage.

His main point was that when the government decided to double the limit of advance grain payments to western farmers to $6,000 last year and ease their repayment schedule, it put small farmers into debt situations they haven't yet been able to get out of and drove many of them to taking welfare in the cities.

The amendments reverse the repayment trend. Although the maximum annual advance payments will remain at $6,000—double what they were when Mr. Horner said Mr. Trudeau decided to buy some votes in the west—repayment schedules are designed to make sure a farmer pays them off within a crop year.

Under the act's current terms advances are repaid by reducing 50 per cent of per-bushel advance money from the initial price paid to farmers when grain is delivered.

REPAY AT SAME RATE

Under the proposed amendments the farmer would pay back at the same rate as the loan was made—if he received a $1-a-bushel advance on a grain, a $1-a-bushel would be taken from his initial price when he delivered.

It would expand the advance payments system from wheat, barley and oats to include flax, rapeseed and rye.

It would also allow the cabinet to grant advances on unharvested grains or grain being dried. The government now must go to Parliament for special legislation in such times of emergency.

The House earlier gave second reading to a bill that would have the government take over responsibility for housing the prime minister, the Opposition leader and the Commons Speaker.

Most speakers favored the clauses in the advance payments amendments that would provide for advance payments on grain that hadn't been delivered because of special circumstances.

But Mr. Horner, Stanley Korchinski (PC—Mackenzie) and Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina-Lake Centre) criticized the government for having eased the advance payments regulations previously instead of taking more positive action to bring Prairie farmers through tough times.

CAMPAIGN DECISION

Prime Minister Trudeau had made the decision while campaigning for the last election, he said. A dictator who had taught law in Montreal and knew absolutely nothing about grain production had decided what should be available in cash advances to western farmers.

The opposition had said when the legislation was being altered there was no way the farmers would be able to pay the money back in the years that they had borrowed it.

The small farmers had been sunk into debt, and the net social benefit had been to put them into polluted cities where they drew welfare.

Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, said the bill would remove the special bias that has been given to wheat production in the past.

It would do so by removing the fixed advance amount for each bushel of wheat and breaking up the formula that allowed advances based only on an equal number of bushels of wheat, barley and oats.

Instead numbers of bushels would vary from grain to grain, with amount and size of per-bushel advance based on the likely delivery of those grains during an ensuing crop year.

NEARLY UNANIMOUS

The prime minister now pays $5,000-a-year rent for his accommodation at 24 Sussex Drive, the Opposition leader is housed in a mansion called Stornoway that is paid for by a trust supported by private citizens, and the Speaker is allowed to reside at a farm in Kingsmere Park, bequeathed to the government by the late prime minister William Lyon Mackenzie King.

Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) and Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) approved the government assumption of responsibility.

But Roland Godin (Creditiste—Portneuf) said it is disgusting that the public will have to pay rent for Prime Minister Trudeau, who had a personal fortune and was well paid besides.

High School To Stage 'The Miser'

An ambitious five-act production, The Miser, by Moliere, opens this evening at Claremont Senior Secondary for a three-night run.

Directed by Margaret A. England, Claremont drama teacher, the cast has been visiting local schools in everyday dress to present excerpts of the 17th Century comedy. On Wednesday, the trimmings of costume and lighting will be added to Claremont's first major production of the year.

Stage manager is Kevin Fry.

Breakfast for Mother's Day

Menu

Orange and Strawberry Fruit Cup.
Eggs in Toast Cups
Oven Bacon
Steaming Hot Coffee

Surprise Mom with breakfast in bed on Mother's Day, Sunday. Start out by arranging orange sections and sliced strawberries in a little salad bowl, sprinkle with sugar. Place the bowl in the refrigerator to keep fresh. Next, separate slices of bacon and place on rack in shallow baking pan. Bake at 400 degrees for 10 minutes. There is no need to turn or drain the bacon. Place the bacon in the warming oven while you are preparing the Eggs In Toast Cups.

Trim crusts from slices of day old bread. Brush both sides with melted butter. Fit each slice into a large muffin pan cup. Toast in the oven at 325 degrees for 15 minutes. Remove from oven. Break an egg into each toast cup. Season with salt and pepper and dot with butter. Cover with foil. Return to oven and bake 12 to 15 minutes or until done. With spatula loosen toast from sides of cups. Serve hot with steaming hot coffee.

BEAMING PREMIER prepares to present the province's gifts to the royal party at a luncheon Tuesday in the Crystal Ballroom at the Empress Hotel. The Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne all received gifts of B.C. jade. PREMIER PRESENTS GIFTS

Royalty Spared Speeches at Lunch

By ANN DUNSMUIR

The luncheon tendered Her Majesty The Queen and the royal party by the province of British Columbia must have been a change fom the usual royal tour function.

There were, for once, no self-gratifying speeches from head table politicians — not even a mention of The Good Life, Our Booming Economy or B.C.'s Potential Development.

The usual guests shared the head table with the royal party. But if the authorities have had the sense to cut the speeches this time they may someday, somewhere consider placing Princess Anne next to an attractive young man.

The Queen and Princess Anne wore the same outfits to the luncheon Tuesday in the Empress Hotel's Crystal Ballroom that they wore to the legislatue in the morning.

Where content was concerned the luncheon was a delight. The form was another matter.

The menu must have been planned by a billiards fanatic.

The vegetables were small round green peas, tiny cherry tomatoes, and carrots operated on so that they resembled bright orange olives. It was a bit like playing pin ball — everything bounced a lot.

The main course was lively but the music definitely was not.

The musical selections chosen must have seemed stale and overly familiar when The Princess Elizabeth was in her bassinette. Played even once The Student Prince is a bit much, but it was repeated over and over along with the Gold and Silver Waltz, The Merry Widow and The New Moon for variety.

Bennett presented the Queen with a necklace and earrings made of B.C. jade and B.C. gold. He asked the Queen to accept the gift as a memento of her visit and added, "with it Ma'am go the loyalty and affection of us all."

Prince Philip and Princess Anne also received gifts of B.C. jade. Princess Anne received a bracelet of gold and jade dogwood blossoms. The prince's gift was a desk-size statue of a grizzly bear.

The Queen's gifts to the province were an oil painting of Queen Victoria as a young mother with Edward, Prince of Wales at about six years of age, and the official documents concerning the choice of the name British Columbia.

In thanking the Queen for her gift Bennett said, "We're proud of the name British Columbia and we will always remain British Columbia."

The same crowds waited throughout the lengthy luncheon to see the royal party leave.

When they emerged from the elevator Princess Anne had discarded her chic straw hat and had let down her long blonde hair.

She looked relieved and happy it was all over.

WINDBLOWN PRINCESS smiles at the crowd as she returns to the royal yacht from her visit to Long Beach. Princess Anne, is wearing the stone colored dress and jacket she wore to the luncheon. She discarded her large straw hat in favor of a head scarf for the trip to Tofino.

Formal Dinner Afloat Crowns 'Two Amazing Days'

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Premier Bennett stepped from the royal Yacht Britannia Tuesday night and called the Queen's visit to Victoria "two amazing days."

Following a dinner party by the Queen which lasted until after 11 p.m., the Britannia sailed out of the Inner Harbor for Patricia Bay where it was scheduled to stay until 10 a.m. today.

"I'm more than pleased," said the premier about the Queen's visit to the city. "It was two amazing days." The Queen's 10-day visit was "off to a wonderful start," he said.

Ladies wore long dresses to the Queen's dinner party. The Queen's gown was a heavy blue silk, and she wore a diamond necklace and diamond chaplet earrings. Princess Anne wore a high collared gown in tangerine.

The menu: "Vichyssoise, Scampi Newburg, Supreme de Volaille Morechale, Haricots Verts au Beurre, Pommes Parisiennes Salade, Mousse au Chocolat en Chemise, Biscuits."

Bennett said following the dinner he was pleased not only with the size of the crowds that greeted the Queen, but he was also impressed with "the warmth of the crowds."

"... especially today ... you could feel the feeling of good will."

The Queen's visit "is doing a tremendous amount of good to the people of British Columbia," Bennett said.

Between 100 and 200 people waited on the inner wharf and the wharf ramp to watch the yacht depart, but the Queen did not appear as the dinner guests disembarked. The outer wharf where the Britannia was moored remained cordoned off throughout the evening.

A small flotilla of RCMP patrol cruisers and tug boats accompanied the yacht as it slowly manoeuvred out of the harbor at 11:30 p.m.

Found: A Union Jack Of Sentimental Value

It is a well-used flag which has been waved on royal visits ever since its owner, an elderly lady was a child.

The two women had been chatting as they sat by the front door of the lobby waiting to see the Queen arrive for lunch.

Mrs. Motherwell's acquaintance explained that she had been given the flag when she was a very young girl, and had always taken it with her to wave for royalty whenever they were on tour.

The irreplaceable keepsake is being kept carefully at the Empress in the hope that its owner will be inquiring for it soon.

Rummage Sale

A rummage sale will be held Saturday from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at St. Mary's Church hall, 1632 Yale Street. The sale is being arranged by Coronation Court, Order of the Amaranth.

GRANOLA AND EGG CROQUETTES
(A Vegetarian Recipe)

1 cup dry Granola
1 hard boiled egg and chopped parsley
1½ cups mashed potato
1 large onion
Salt to taste

Steam Granola by pouring a little boiling water over it. Add mashed potato and browned onion. Add chopped egg and parsley; mix well together. Mould into croquette shape, roll into finely sifted Granola and bake until brown.

COTTAGE CHEESE CROQUETTES
(A Vegetarian Recipe)

1 cup cottage cheese
1 cup chopped nuts
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons grated onion
1 cup bread crumbs
¼ cup chopped parsley
1 cup milk

Mix all the ingredients together well and form into croquettes. Dip in a rich milk and egg mixture, then in zwieback crumbs. Place in an oiled pan and bake in a hot oven, until well browned. Serve with tomato sauce.

BUILT-IN BENCHES . . . for den or guest room

Den Converts To Guest Room

By PAULINE GRAVES

Most development houses come unembellished to the purchaser. In other words, the basic price includes a couple of built-in appliances, but the four walls of each room boast no architectural details.

For these, you pay extra, just as you pay for extras in a car. In a way, this is good. Given the empty walls, you can add the extras and tailor them to your tastes.

Shown here is a development house in which the smallest bedroom became a den-guest room, decorated by Carole Eichen. It could have been a bedroom but the need was for a double-purpose room, and so it became. The built-in bench, with a foam rubber pad, provides seating and extra sleeping facilities for occasional out-of-town guests. Shelves and cabinets surround the bench, the bookshelves creating a den atmosphere, and the cabinets storing games, camera equipment and miscellany.

Below the bench, drawers keep bed linens at the ready, and a small chest nearby is adequate for clothing. The room is compact, usable and completely attractive, and this one wall, filled with the built-in structure, does the whole thing. Although the framework is white, drawer and cabinet fronts are painted assorted shades of beige, soft orange and pink, the same colors carried to the wall behind the shelves.

Space left between the six-foot bench and the side walls determined the two foot widths of shelves and cabinets, the shelves eight-inches deep, spaced eleven inches apart, and the cabinets, thirty-one inches deep and twenty-four inches high.

Grandma Shawls Are Back Again

From nowhere, it seems, a new craze for doing handwork has sprung up among us. In young fashion circles, so prevalent has "making your own" become that even the fashion magazines have been devoting a lot of space to sewing, crocheting, knitting, hand-painting leather and macrame, just to name a few handcrafts now popular.

Of course, doing handwork really hasn't been all that unpopular. Millions of women and girls have been doing all the things named above right along through the years.

It's the more exotic crafts, such as macrame, which have called public attention again to the delights of creating your own fashion.

Of course, the purveyors of those standard handwork items such as clothing patterns, fabrics, trimmings and yarns for knitting and crocheting are perfectly delighted. From caps and hats through an entire wardrobe of garments, they're prepared to supply directions.

One of the more popular items right now is also one of the oldest, the grandma shawl. Youngsters and fashionable women alike, who two years ago wouldn't have been caught dead in a shawl, are wearing them everywhere, particularly as evening wraps. If you've made it yourself, score lots of fashion Brownie points for you!

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — Centnnials are old hat for Laura Jordan, who recently celebrated her 105th birthday.

She turned 100 in 1966 and the next year took an interest in Canada's centennial.

Born in Ohio in 1866, Mrs. Jordan moved with her husband in 1912 from Colorado to a homestead in Saskatchewan. She now lives in a nursing home.

Among those at a family celebration were two of her four sons, the oldest of whom is 84 and farmed until two years ago.

Friends said her memory has remained sharp and, as a former dressmaker, she continues to be particular about her clothes.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Loves Short-Shorts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you with a problem two years ago. I had a pretty young neighbor who wore short shorts and a halter top to do her housework in. She also went outdoors to hang her laundry in that outfit. I used to feel badly because my husband would always find some excuse to go outside and talk to her.

I asked you what I should do, and you wrote me a personal reply saying, "If that's what your husband likes, buy some shorts and a halter top and give your neighbor a little competition."

I followed your advice, feeling a bit self-conscious because I have a slightly cripped arm, but I soon got over my shyness when I saw how my husband reacted. He just loved seeing me in that outfit and became so much more demonstrative and affectionate toward me.

Abby, the last two years of our marriage have been the best in all the 10 we've been married. I think you should have put my first letter and your personal reply in the paper. It might have helped other timid wives overcome their shyness and put more happiness into their lives. — Grateful.

DEAR GRATEFUL: It's still not too late. Thanks for writing. Your letter made my day.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow and I live alone. Nearly every Sunday a cousin comes to visit me for a few hours, and she always brings a lot of gossip about the rest of the family. I am really not interested in hearing about the marital woes of this niece and that nephew, or the financial struggles of other relatives, or which relative is on the outs with another relative, and that's all she ever talks about.

How can I avoid having the family garbage dumped on me week after week? I try to change the subject, but she gets right back on it again. If I tell her plainly I don't care for family gossip, she will berate me for my "holier than thou" attitude. She is vicious. Can you help me? — Anti-Gossip.

DEAR ANTI-GOSSIP: You'll need an accomplice for my solution. Invite a friend or neighbor over. Even the most vicious gossip will refrain from washing the family linen in the presence of a third party.

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a wonderful man, and we have four children. Elmer (not real name) and I are very happy, but my problem is my mother-in-law.

She never comes over unless specifically invited. I can't understand this as we try to let her know that she is welcome to drop in anytime. Elmer feels neglected because he has a sister, whom his mother talks to daily, and to whose house she goes often. This sister doesn't live any closer to his mother than we do.

Elmer stops in to see his mother at least once a week, but he feels hurt that she never comes here. Is it true that "A son is a son until he takes a wife, but a daughter is a daughter all her life?" — No Town Please

DEAR NO TOWN: Not necessarily, but the mother-daughter relationship is usually closer than the mother-son. There are many exceptions, however. Tell Elmer to quit sitting around wondering what's wrong, and to ask his mother straight out if there is some reason she doesn't visit more often. And if she assures him that all is well he should quit pouting, and continue to call on her to keep in touch.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JUST PLAIN UNLUCKY: A world about "luck," my friend: The harder one works, the luckier he gets.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Edmonton CWL Considers Alternatives to Abortion

CAMROSE, Alta. (CP) — Alternatives to women seeking abortions were stressed during a panel discussion of the 49th annual convention of the Roman Catholic Women's League of the Edmonton archdiocese during the weekend.

"We've got to realize that women who see no other alternative than abortion have only one road ahead," said Yvonne Sell of the research committee for family life education.

"Our job, I think, is to support them with alternatives because if we profess such a profound reverence for life, we'd better prove it to all people."

Sister Rose Bekar, director of St. Mary's Hospital in Camrose, said: "If we consider abortion a most grievous moral wrong, we have a serious obligation to remove the conditions leading to abortion."

She suggested that delegates work to lessen the concern of parents through more proper medical care for handicapped children, counselling and that they support unwed mothers by accepting them.

"We have the additional responsibility to ensure that women are given help to have their babies."

Speaking on the Christian belief in the sanctity of human life Sister Bekar said that "if we consider life sacred in one situation, such as abortion, so it must be in all situations, and we must be consistent in the way we treat it — in the hospital, the death cell, and the womb.

"If we don't stand up and be heard, the immorality of a few will become the morality of a nation."

Mrs. Sell said married women, not the clergy, should take the leadership in giving solutions for population control.

Inability to Read Music Doesn't Stop Young Composer

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Shirley Rose Eikhard is just another teen-aged high school student — except that when she chatters on the telephone the party at the other end of the line is likely to be in Toronto, New York City, Nashville, Tenn., or Hollywood.

The 15-year-old Sackville, N.B., native cannot read or write music, yet she is regarded as hot show business property with a prosperous future as a composer and singer.

Despite not being able to put her music on paper, the Grade 10 student has inherited talent. Her mother, June Eikhard, toured North America as "Canada's first lady of the fiddle," her father once was a professional musician and her 16-year-old brother Brent plays bass guitar with a popular Oshawa group.

The talented teen-ager has signed a five-year contract with Beechwood Music, a Toronto music publisher, and Miss Murray, another Maritimer, has recorded one of her creations: It Takes Time.

Beechwood head Gary Buck says Miss Eikhard is one of the most talented youngsters he has seen in several years. "It is not often that so much talent is wrapped up in one package," he says. "Her writing is very mature and is readily adaptable to other artists and music."

Miss Eikhard made her first public appearance at the 1969 Mariposa Filg Festival. She applied for audition as a writer of new songs and was selected to appear at the festival over 60 applicants.

"We don't inquire about age on our application forms," says the Mariposa artistic director, Estelle Klein. "Her audition tape was accepted and what a surprise we had when we discovered she was only 13 years old."

A Toronto newspaper reviewer wrote favorably of the first public look at Miss Eikhard. "After talking to this shy girl whose eyes move nervously with her smile," he wrote, "it is almost a shock to hear the strong, reflective, sometimes nostalgic tones and firm finger-picking of the songs."

The Oshawa youngster does not let her new career block her studies. She manages an honor rating at Donevan high school with a 75-per-cent average.

When she does devote time to her musical abilities, Miss Eikhard simply accompanies herself on a guitar and hums or sings into a tape recorder. When she considers the composition finished, she gives the tape to her publisher and he transposes it to paper.

HUMMEL TRIAL

Defence Attacks Testimony

The Crown finished leading evidence Tuesday in the tax evasion trial of Victoria lawyer-businessman David Hummel, and defence counsel immediately began attacking the testimony of prosecution witness Kenneth Stokes.

Stokes, an investigator with the taxation branch of the federal national revenue department, has been the key witness called by prosecutor Robert Hutchison.

Hummel is charged with evading income taxes on $127,000 as well as four counts of making false statements on income tax returns.

Hummel's lawyer John Spencer of Vancouver first tried to make Stokes admit that he had been investigating Hummel's business affairs 14 months prior to June, 1969, the date he had given in earlier testimony.

NO FILES

Spencer said revenue department records show that Stokes received some of Hummel's income tax returns in April, 1968. But Stokes said no files were signed to him until April, 1969.

When Spencer asked whether Stokes' answer meant he disagreed with federal records, admitted earlier in the trial, Stokes said yes.

Stokes also said he had not talked to Hummel about the investigation and had not invited him to make submissions to the department on his behalf.

Under further cross-examination, Stokes also said he had not interviewed Mrs. Hummel.

Spencer produced a revenue department policy bulletin from December, 1970 which stated that investigators "will" interview persons under investigation if the government plans to lay charges.

FILES OF CASH

Before this, Stokes had said he understood the bulletin to say that interviews "may" be conducted. But Spencer read from the document, saying that part of the purpose of the interview would be to allow those to be charged to make submissions to the government.

Still under questioning, Stokes agreed with Spencer that Hummel had made all documents available to the government and had waived all privileges regarding them.

Before Hutchison finished leading evidence, he had Stokes trace the flow of cash from sales of Common shares in the Red Lion Motor Hotel Ltd. The shares, 2,000 of them, were issued at one cent each on July 28, 1965 and sold between August, 1965 and November, 1966 at $50 each.

The proceeds were paid into Hummel's law firm, then loaned to companies owned by Hummel and his business partners Siegfried Marquardt and the late William Osland.

Hutchison has told Judge E. F. N. Robinson that he will later argue that Hummel should have paid taxes in his share of the proceeds, because they cannot be claimed as capital gains.

ACTUALLY INCOME

Tuesday, Hutchison also said that proceeds from the sale of Red Lion shares which were listed as having gone to Hummel's wife actually were Hummel's income.

Testifying under Hutchison's questioning, Stokes has indicated that these proceeds and those from share sales from another of Hummel's companies, Park Royal Holdings Ltd., had been transferred from company to the personal holdings of Hummel, his partners and their wives.

Speaking to this line of testimony, Spencer asked Stokes whether the government considers profits from stock sales which are not filed on income tax returns to be capital gains.

Stokes said yes. Spencer then asked whether it is difficult to determine the difference between capital gains and income.

"Each case has to be weighed on its own merits," Stokes said. And he added that the taxpayer must decide this for himself on a "self-assessing system."

NOT DONE

Spencer asked whether the government will advise persons whether their transactions are capital gains or income. Stokes said this is not done.

"He (the taxpayer) pays his money and he takes his choice, is that a fair way to put it?" asked Spencer.

"Yes," said Stokes.

Spencer also asked Stokes if he knew whether Hummel personally had sold shares in Park Royal Holdings Ltd.

"I have no idea," Stokes said.

"Have you ever asked him?" Spencer asked.

"No."

When Spencer asked the same questions regarding the sale of Red Lion shares, Stokes said the same thing. The cross-examination continues today.

Before the Judge

Two lower mainland men were given suspended sentences with two-year probations in court by Judge E. F. M. Robinson Tuesday on a charge of breaking and entering with intent.

Michael John Tennyson, 25, of North Vancouver, and Robert Hatfield White, 40, of New Westminster, were earlier found guilty.

The offence occurred last Dec. 19 when the accused were found near a food market at 2077 Cadboro Bay that had been broken into.

* * *

Ronald K. Lapointe, Alder St., was given a suspended sentence with a six-month probation by Judge William Ostler for possession of stolen property over $50.

He pleaded guilty to having a leather coat in his possession April 16 that had been stolen by another person from Woodward's department store.

* * *

Glen David Hayes, 17, of 2765 Strathmore, was fined $300 by Ostler for possession of a restricted drug.

Hayes earlier pleaded guilty to having a quantity of LSD wrapped with him when he was searched by police Feb. 1.

* * *

Donald R. Larsen, 18, of 2541 Empire, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a year's probation by Ostler on a charge of prowling at night.

He pleaded guilty earlier to the offence. Larsen was apprehended outside an apartment building on Empress about 11 p.m. April 19 by a man who held him for police.

The judge said he realized Larsen suffered an emotional problem and added that apart from that he was a good student and a competent athlete.

* * *

Leslie James Green, 17, of 388 Vincent, pleaded guilty Monday to breaking into the G. R. Pearkes arena, 3100 Tillicum, May 1 and stealing about $1,000 worth of stereo equipment.

A Saanich police officer said the accused with a juvenile broke in about 1 a.m. took the equipment as well as two dollars in chocolate bars from a machine. Police recovered the stereo equipment, he said.

The officer said the safe in the office had been attacked by the culprits although entry was not gained. He said a fire extinguisher had been sprayed around inside the building and the office was in "shambles."

Ostler remanded Green to May 14.

Blood Donors Respond

The Red Cross blood donor service said that a total of 175 donors responded during the past two days to appeals to help augment dangerously low supplies of blood.

Spokesman Johnny MacNeill said that 94 donors attended the clinic at Eatons Wednesday and 81 at Sidney Tuesday.

"We were very pleased, it was just the number we'd hoped for," he said.

Today the clinic will be at Union Centre until 4:30 this afternoon and from 6:30 to 9 this evening.

On Thursday it will be at the Institute of Adult Studies, Lansdowne Road, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

700 Covering Royal Tour

Approximately 700 newsmen and photographers have been accredited to cover the Royal Family's centennial visit.

Approximately 50 reporters, cameramen and photographers covering the Royal Family's Victoria visit were present at the meeting at which the complicated press arrangements were spelled out for the remainder of the Victoria end of the visit.

Newspapermen in attendance included representatives from the Seattle Times and Post-Intelligencer and the Portland Oregonian as well as members of the British Press.

The briefing included such details as how photographers should station themselves during an honor-guard ceremony today in front of the legislative buildings and the fact that reporters were not permitted to quote anything during a press reception aboard the Royal Yacht Britannia today at noon.

MARKING CENTENNIAL

Bank Executives to Visit

Senior executives of the Bank of Montreal will make a rare visit to Victoria May 17 to mark the entry of British Columbia to Confederation.

It is expected there will be a brief meeting of the executive council.

They and the bank's board of directors will be in the west for a directors' meeting in Vancouver May 18, and will pay their respects to the capital with a luncheon honoring the lieutenant-governor, premier, mayors and other representatives.

In the late afternoon the bank will be host to about 350 business and industrial leaders at a men-only reception.

Leading the party, expected to consist of 14 senior officers, will be chairman and chief executive officer G. Arnold Hart, president J. Leonard Walker and vice-chairman R. D. (Pete) Mulholland, who 20 years ago was manager of the main Victoria branch at Yates and Douglas.

Among western directors of the bank are four Vancouver men, industrialist Harold S. Foley, Forrest Rogers, president, B.C. Sugar Refineries Ltd., James Sinclair, president, Canada Cement-Lafarge Ltd. and John Prentice, chairman, Canadian Forest Products Ltd.

Bank of Montreal held a directors' meeting in Vancouver May 8, 1962, its first in this province, preceded by an executive meeting in Victoria the day before.

In 5 Years It'll Be Too Late for Canada—Hurtig

Within the next five years the Canadian government must enact legislation to reverse the trend toward foreign ownership of the conomy, Edmonton publisher Mel Hurtig said here Tuesday.

But don't expect the present Liberal cabinet to take serious action, Hurtig warned.

"We have in our cabinet a group of men who aren't going to take the strong steps necessary to reverse this trend," he said.

Hurtig was interviewed prior to a speaking engagement at a meeting of the Victoria branches of the Committee for an Independent Canada (CIC). He owns one of the largest retail bookstores in Canada, is on the editorial board of the Journal of Canadian Studies and is a member of the liberal party's national policy committee.

TOO LATE

He said if decisive action to encourage Canadian ownership and curb foreign ownership is not taken in the next five years, it will be too late to keep the country independent from the United States.

After five years control of the economy could only be regained through drastic measures, and these would not be tolerated by American interests.

However, the resignation last week of Communications Minister Eric Kierans in disagreement with government economic policy is an indication the government doesn't intend to go beyond token gestures in ending the sell-out of the economy, Hurtig said.

He said three federal cabinet ministers — Energy Minister J. J. Greene, Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp — have been "begging" the U.S. government to opt for construction of an oil pipeline through the Mackenzie valley on American terms.

WEAK POSITION

The Canadian government is bargaining from a position of weakness, and the near future could bring a situation where American marines would be guarding American installations here from attacks by the Weathermen.

Hurtig predicted National Revenue Minister Herb Gray's upcoming report on foreign ownership will be "first-rate", but that it will be shelved by the government.

"Nothing's going to happen. The public will never see it."

Hollis Dole, President Nixon's chief energy advisor, has said the U.S. must seek a long-term energy agreement with Canada to satisfy its energy needs, Hurtig said. But Canadian economists agree a long-term agreement is not in Canada's best interests.

Nevertheless, Canada's "trump card" in the energy poker game was thrown away when the government last September approved a 50 per cent increase in exports of natural gas over the next 20 years. The increase amounts 6.3 trillion cubic feet.

OUTSIDE OWNED

Sixty-two per cent of Canadian manufacturing industry now is owned outside the country, as compared with 10 per cent of France's manufacturing industry and 15 per cent in Britain.

The ironic twist is that foreign companies which want to expand or buy up Canadian firms do so with Canadian money.

"We're selling out the country and financing it ourselves," Hurtig said.

He estimated 70 per cent of loans from Canadian banks this year would go to foreign concerns operating in Canada.

There is growing evidence which indicates about two-thirds of the trade between Canada and the U.S. is between parent companies and subsidiaries, Hurtig said.

That is, subsidiaries sell raw materials to parent companies south of the border for manufacturing, and the finished products are sold back to subsidiaries for marketing here.

NOT EASY

Hurtig rejected the suggestion that the Committee for an Independent Canada, in seeking to bolster Canadian free enterprise, is actually replacing the evil of foreign capitalism with the evil of domestic capitalism.

"It's a hell of lot easier to control the corporate decisions made in this country than it is to control corporate decision taken in the boardrooms of New York."

The CIC was formed last fall and now has several thousand members across the country, including people of such diverse political and social views as members of the New Democratic Party Waffle and the Progressive Conservative Party.

In Hurtig's words, "it's the closest thing to a populist movement this country has ever had."

Locally, university and downtwon branches of the CIC were formed last month. The local contact is Uvic political science teacher Norman Ruff.

150,000 NAMES

CIC's short-term goal is to collect signatures of about 200,000 Canadians for a petition opposing foreign domination of the economy.

Some 150,000 names have already been collected, Hurtig said, and these will be presented to Prime Minister Trudeau sometime between June 22 and 26.

"What we're doing is saying to the government, 'Look, this is how the people feel. What are you going to do about it?' "

The CIC has no plans to become a political party, but following the 1972 federal elections it could force a coalition of MPs from all parties on certain economic questions.

Retaining economic independence is just one phase of the larger goal of building a society with different values than those of the United States, Hurtig said.

"We have an opportunity to create a country where the quality of life is more important than the gross national product."

He was asked why he is a member of the Liberal Party since his views seem to differ greatly with those of the government. He replied that there are many economic nationalists within the party ranks but they have not yet succeeded in gaining control of the party.

No Warmth, No Heart, Little Thought

By ELIZABETH FORBES

There is no doubt that acceptance of the need for intermediate care — less than private hospitals are equipped to give and more than boarding homes (as they are today) can give — is overdue. It has long been advocated by doctors, social workers, individuals and volunteer organizations working with and concerned about our aging citizens, and many, many times in this column.

Forbes

That the provincial government has now taken a first step toward such a program is good news in itself but if it is true that Victoria's part of the plan will see an 150-bed intermediate care building erected adjacent to the vocational school and hospital for the retarded in Saanich, then the news has its disappointing element, too.

NOT BEST

First because the Saanich location is surely not the best place to put elderly citizens who aren't really ill and second because the plan seems to have all the elements of a cold, impersonal decision, with no warmth, no heart and indeed little thought for the people who will live in those rooms.

Granted that care for such persons is complex, more so perhaps in Victoria than in any other place. We do have a large percentage of retired persons living here from other places in Canada and we have an equal number of our own citizens retired and on fixed incomes.

They are all in the same boat. When they begin to slow up, when they cannot attend to all their own needs, there is little or nothing for them in the way of accommodation, unless it is boarding homes or private hospitals.

DEFINITE NEED

Certainly then, there is definite need for the intermediate care proposed by the provincial government, but whether the answer is in an 150-bed institution, I'm not sure.

There are public-minded persons who advocate a more intimate type of care in much smaller and more home-like places and after an experience I had last Saturday I find myself almost ready to agree with them.

It happened I was invited to open a May Day tea at the Salvation Army's Sunset Lodge on Arm Street, right at the edge of Selkirk waters up the Gorge.

This lodge, once a large family residence and situated in a garden of lawns, flowers and old fruit and shade trees, now gives intermediate care to 22 elderly women residents, a few of whom are in their 90s. They were all present at the tea, along with friends and many interested visitors.

HOME-LIKE

It was quite obvious that in this home-like atmosphere and with the warm and living care they were receiving, these elderly citizens were happy, contented and continued to feel wanted.

They have a crafts class once a week on a wide, glassed-in verandah, arranged and taught by members of the lodge's ladies' auxiliary.

They also have their own missionary circle once a week. There are talks and special events and through these they send a sum of around $100 each year to a school for the blind in Jamaica.

A birthday party with gifts and a cake is hosted every month by the auxiliary for those residents who are marking another year. The auxiliary also arranges a Christmas party and a summer picnic as well as many other interesting events.

HAPPY FACES

Looking around at the bright and happy faces of these fortunate enough to live in Sunset Lodge I couldn't help feeling that this type of residence in many ways is far superior and far more modern in concept than an 150-bed institution.

Perhaps the smaller, more home-like places would not be as economical in the beginning as would adding another building to the Saanich complex, but certainly it would more nearly answer the needs of those who are looking for intermediate care yet are still anxious to be part of society and not just numbers in an institutional computing system.

Alliance Wants To Organize Armed Forces

OTTAWA (CP) — A drive is under way by Canada's largest public service union for the right to organize members of the armed forces, the RCMP and other as yet unorganized public service personnel.

A brief released Tuesday by the Public Service Alliance would also include organizational efforts for the House of Commons and Senate staffs, the Governor-General's staff and locally engaged staff abroad.

The brief was submitted last week to a special three-man committee set up by Manpower Minister Otto Lang to review public service legislation passed in 1966. It will be discussed by the committee Friday.

The submission on the military says no good reason exists to deny collective bargaining in the armed forces and the development of such rights would go a long way to improve morale.

But while the majority of the members of the armed forces favor some form of collective bargaining, it states, they overwhelmingly reject the right to strike.

The alliance grants that collective bargaining would not be applicable in the event of war or other national emergency.

IMPROVE BENEFITS

The 140,000-member union and many of the 90,000 military people are dissatisfied with conditions in the forces. They were concerned with career benefits for themselves and the health, education and security of their families.

Under collective bargaining, the alliance states, methods of administering pay and allowances, promotional procedures, grievance processes and pension conditions would be greatly improved.

"This will seem to some a radical departure from the traditional ways of the military, but we are convinced that if Canada is to maintain a viable volunteer force it must be done."

For the RCMP, the alliance proposes a separate staff relations act to cover a force expected to grow to 11,350 by next March from the present 10,600. Again, it was not seeking the right to strike.

Municipal and provincial police forces have long been covered by collective bargaining by police associations covering wages, hours of work and other pertinent operational procedures.

REAGAN

Taxes Don't Hurt Reagan

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan, a millionaire who once said "taxes should hurt," has disclosed he didn't have to pay any 1970 California state income taxes.

The reason was busines losses suffered by Reagan during the year, the governor's office said.

Reagan's salary as governor was $44,000 in 1970, boosted to $49,100 thisyear.

The average California family of four with earnings of $7,000 would pay $2. A businessman earning about what the governor does would pay more than $2,700 if he had no business losses to deduct.

Steelworkers to Discuss Strike Fund Boost

TORONTO (CP) — The United Steelworkers of America open their annual policy conference here Thursday and the 450 delegates from across Canada will be asked to sanction a union scheme for supplementary strike funds for Canadian workers.

Although details of the proposal will not be released until the conference begins, William Mahoney, Canadian director of the Steelworkers, said Tuesday the union executive has drawn up plans for area strike funds so Canadian workers will not strain the international union's treasury in the event of Canadian strikes.

About 300 delegates to the USW policy conference in Edmonton last year passed a resolution calling on Mr. Mahoney and his executive to draft a plan that would enable Canadians to draw more substantial strike pay without depleting the reserves of USW members in the United States.

The resolution was passed after Mr. Mahoney reported that the union's international headquarters had paid $12,279,385 to support striking Canadian workers in 1969, while during the same period Canadian contributions totalled only $4,070,548.

At that time, Mr. Mahoney said the Canadian section of the Steelworkers, Canada's largest union with 155,000 members, had not paid its share of the cost in years and that the $8 million worth of American generosity had cost the U.S. members considerable bargaining power.

Officer Critical

KAMLOOPS (CP)—An RCMP officer from the Cariboo district was in critical condition with a bullet wound in the abdomen suffered in a shooting incident in which one man was killed.

A spokesman for Royal Inland Hospital in this interior city said Constable Jeffrey F. Touround underwent surgery after being flown from Clinton, where he was wounded when a man resisted arrest.

Police there said the constable had picked up Douglas Higginbottam, 40, for questioning near Kelly Lake, seven miles from Clinton.

Police said the man grabbed the constable's service revolver and in the ensuing struggle shot the officer in the abdomen, but was then shot and killed as he tried to escape.

Tit-for-Tat In Province Egg War

QUEBEC (CP) — Provincial Justice Minister Jerome Choquette, intervening in a national assembly debate Tuesday on the "chicken-and-egg war," said Quebec "would lead Ontario back to reason."

"We will go no further than our Ontario colleagues," he said. "We will treat them the same way they treat us."

Mr. Choquette made the comment during an assembly debate on the second reading of Bill 15 which would establish a body to seize Ontario eggs entering the Quebec market.

If the bill is passed, Ontario eggs entering the Quebec market will be seized by the province's agricultural marketing board which can then dispose of them as it wishes.

Mr. Choquette was replying to criticisms of Normand Toupin, agricultural minister, by Rean-Noel Tremblay, former minister of cultural affairs in the Union Nationale government of Jean-Jacques Bertrand.

Mr. Tremblay said that Mr. Toupin had no policy. Mr. Choquette said that Mr. Toupin's retaliatory response to an Ontario measure controlling the import to that province of broiler chickens was valuable and praiseworthy.

Ontario recently passed a law allowing local marketing boards to seize all broiler chickens imported into Ontario and sold without a licence.

British Columbia, Ontario, Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Nova Scotia have all passed legislation restricting the sale of chickens from outside their provinces in their local markets.

They passed that legislation after Quebec's egg marketing body, (FEDCO) established by the Quebec Federation of Egg Producers, restricted egg imports to Quebec to 40 per cent of the total provincial market in May 1970.

Art for Sale

TORONTO (CP) — A small tempera sketch by the late Frederick Varley, a member of the Group of Seven, will be the leading item at Sotheby's spring sale of Canadian paintings, drawings and sketches Wednesday and Thursday. Relatively minor works by other Group of Seven members—A. Y. Jackson, Lawren Harris, Arthur Lismer and A. J. Casson—also will be offered. The featured tempra, about nine inches square, depicts a bombed-out cemetery in Belgium.

AT FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL MEETING IN VICTORIA

By DENNIS BELL

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis makes his national debut at next month's constitutional conference in Victoria with plans to grab the tiger by the tail—federal government fiscal policies.

In an interview with The Canadian Press after completing his first two months as Ontario's 18th premier, the Progressive Conservative leader echoed his administration's growing impatience with the Trudeau government's handling of economic matters.

Mr. Davis said Ottawa has implemented policies deliberately aimed at taking the wind out of Ontario's economic sails and he wants an accounting from Prime Minister Trudeau at the June 14-16 federal-provincial conference.

"We're in a bind and we feel that this has to be a matter of very real priority," said the 41-year-old successor to John Robarts, citing a $415 million deficit in the province's 1971-72 budget.

Mr. Davis asked Prime Misister Trudeau in writing to include fiscal policy in the agenda for the Victoria conference, called primarily to deal with repatriation of the 1867 British North America Act and methods of amending it.

The new premier also bluntly declared he would like the premiers and the prime minister to get into specifics about the impact of federal policies on provincial economics.

To many observers, this kind of talk indicates that Mr. Davis has dropped the mediatory role that Mr. Robarts carved out at conferences during discussions on such questions as language rights among the federal government, Quebec and the rest of the provinces.

Mr. Davis insists he'll continue on the Robarts path in June, but the attacks on monetary and tax matters emanating from Queen's Park are getting longer and louder.

In the background looms the possibility of a provincial election this year.

Saddled with a huge deficit, a jumbled tangle of policy differences with Ottawa, large-scale unemployment and an uncertain image with the electorate, Mr. Davis said he simply hasn't made up his mind whether there'll be an election this year or not.

At stake is 28 years of unbroken Conservative government in Ontario under five premiers.

Q. In his budget speech, Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough said Ontario will have to reassess its role in the Canadian federation. What is Ontario thinking of reassessing?

DAVIS
. . . impatient

A. This is really not a new posture—it's related to our fiscal and financial situation. Certain changes must be made, there must be some reconsideration. Provincial jurisdictions have growing responsibilities such as health, education and social services.

The treasurer in very specific terms pointed out some of the options. It would be logical to have the federal government allow us greater room or flexibility in the income tax area and cost-sharing agreements.

Q. How serious is the dispute between the provinces and the federal government on tax reform?

A. I'm not going to be put into the position of developing a confrontation with Ottawa, though I think any provincial prime minister has the responsibility to put forward his point of view.

I think it is very important that people recognize that the question of tax reform has to be one of the really major priorities. Take a look at the provincial budget—a substantial deficit. There is no question that some of the financial measures of a national character in the past year have reduced Ontario's economic growth. The percentage figures indicate that Ontario has felt the effect more than some of our sister provinces, and this is what we say is fundamentally wrong.

Q. Are you looking towards a total rewriting of the BNA Act?

A. I am. I think the first thing is a patriation of the BNA Act and an agreement on the amending formula and certain other aspects of the constitution. I think it's fair to state that Ontario really is more or less in the forefront of the desire for constitutional change.

Q. Would you say that we have to put a time limit on this? Are we running out of time?

A. I think it's important that we move ahead. I would like to see real progress in Victoria. I'm not sure that I hold the same viewpoint as expressed by some, who perhaps have a bit more experience, that if it isn't done in June, we should put it to bed for a few years.

Q. How do you feel about an exchange of powers between the federal and provincial governments? They have money that you need, you have certain powers that perhaps they would want?

A. This has been discussed and I think that at some time, all the provinces have said we should try to rationlize areas of responsibility with areas of tax resources.

Certainly, Quebec at the last conference in February indicated its desire to have some social programs as strictly a matter of provincial responsibility. Our position in Ontario is not necessarily opposed to that approach. Our feeling is that perhaps we can accomplish this through areas of tax reform just as easily. There may be a little philosophical difference here, I don't know.

Q. Have you any plans that would indicate to the people that the government is making an all-out effort in the field of Canadian ownership?

A. I think it is logical that this province can, without detiment to anyone, become more pro-Canadian without becoming anti-this, or anti-that. It's in the minds of some people that if you are pro-Canadian you are automatically anti-American. This is not the case at all.

The government announced two or three measures in the budget that are within provincial jurisdiction indicating our desire to assist Canadian industry to a greater extent, and not to the detriment of others.

GOYER FACES PROBE OVER RCMP, PRISONS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee said Tuesday it plans to question Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer intensively about RCMP and prison policies.

Liberals, Conservatives and New Democrats agreed to set aside the rest of the month for the inquisition.

Goyer's spending estimates for the RCMP and the federal prison service are still before the committee but it must deal with them by a May 31 deadline.

NIXON TO RISK LOCKHEED LOAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon apparently has decided to risk a stiff congressional fight over federal loan guarantees to stave off collapse of Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the No. 1 defence contractor.

But there are indications on Capitol Hill the battle may be over how—not whether—to provide the guarantees that could save 30,000 jobs.

Following a breakfast meeting with the president Tuesday, congressional leaders said legislation providing $250 million in guarantees is expected within two weeks.

Representative Leslie C. Arends of Illinois, House of Representatives Republican whip, said there was no disagreement at the White House session over giving aid to the Burbank, Calif., company, jolted earlier this year when Rolls Royce Ltd., British maker of engines for Lockheed's L 1011 airliner, went into reorganization.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said various proposals were discussed at the White House but "the feeling I get is that legislation will be specific," dealing just with Lockheed.

As the administration has edged closer to formally proposing loan guarantees for Lockheed, the idea has picked up tentative support from such liberal Senate Democrats as Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota and Edmund S. Muskie of Maine.

However, Sen. William Proxmire (Dem. Wis.) has declared he would fight guarantees with the same fervor he used earlier this year to help defeat continued federal funding of a supersonic-transport plane.

'Now We Talk About Future . . . And Hope'

The talk used to be of politics, high cost of living, the kids, a weekend in the mountains, the new car. But not since Black Thursday, Feb. 4, 1971.

That day Rolls-Royce, Britain's manufacturer of luxury automobiles and jet engines for the TriStar, announced its financial collapse. The news jolted Lockheed, threatening cancellation of the TriStar project and financial collapse of the firm.

"In the break time, the smoke period, we don't talk about much else anymore," said Ronge, a 50-year-old tool planner who joined Lockheed in 1940. "We read the morning papers and listen to the radio for any news about what they're doing."

More Money For Hostels

OTTAWA (CP) — Local groups sponsoring summer youth hostels will have more money to work with following capital cost cuts in the federal youth hostel information kiosks building program.

Hostel program director Brian Gilhuly said Wednesday kiosk building costs have been sharply reduced because of a change in design.

As a result, the federal program will be able to make more grants to local agencies sponsoring youth hostels this summer.

Mr. Gilhuly said enough money would be available to provide without the kiosk-allocated money.

Moreover, estimates from local agencies seem to indicate that hostels can be run at a lower cost than was originally thought.

Federal grants are based on a figure not in excess of $1.80 a bed-night. Different places and different hostels are allocated different amounts, Mr. Gilhuly said. Costs vary greatly with regions.

Mr. Gilhuly said no firm estimate could be made of the number of transients who will take to the road this summer.

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier estimated early in April that the figure might, at most, reach 400,000. Last year about 150,000 to 200,000 travelled.

Of the total 60,000 to 70,000 used government-aided youth hostels for varying lengths of time. About 115,000 bed-nights were chalked up in the hostels.

Dies at 110

Second Time Laos Town Falls To N. Vietnamese

SAIGON (AP) — Muong Phalane, the easternmost point held by Laotian government forces in the central part of the Laotian panhandle, was reported today to have fallen to the North Vietnamese for the second time in 2½ months.

Muong Phalane is on Highway 9, 55 miles east of the Laotian military district headquarters of Savannakhet and 45 miles west of Sepone, where the South Vietnamese invasion along Highway 9 stopped.

Field reports said the government troops were outnumbered about two to one by 1,500 to 2,000 North Vietnamese soldiers and pulled out under heavy attack.

Muong Phalane was captured by Communist forces 2½ months ago, then was retaken by Laotian government troops six weeks ago.

CRITICS URGING B-1 SCRAPPING

WASHINGTON (AP) — A renewed congressional attack on the Pentagon budget has opened with claims the proposed B-1 bomber system could cost as much as $75 billion and be obsolete by the time it is ready to fly.

Critics contend the B-1 will be unable to perform its missions, will escalate the arms race, cost billions more than estimated and, finally, be outgunned by enemy defence systems.

A report urged the B-1 program be scrapped and further research devoted to a fleet of flying missile-launching platforms to augment land and sea-based missiles.

Such a device could fire missiles from long range, the report reasoned, without exposing itself to hazards of attempting to penetrate anti-aircraft defences.

Senator George McGovern, a former bomber pilot, headed the group that wrote the report.

"My own view is that missiles have pretty well relegated the manned bomber to a museum piece," McGovern told a news conference Tuesday.

The air force estimates B-1 costs at a maximum $11.1 billion. The congressmen said an estimate of $47.2 billion is more credible in view of swiftly escalating cost overruns.

When all related costs over the next decade are added up, the report asserted, the total could reach $75 billion.

Income Drops

OTTAWA (CP) — Net farm income in 1970 totalled $1,192.9 million, a 24.5 per cent decline from a year earlier, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports. The decline resulted from lower cash receipts, a rise in farm outlay for goods and services, and partially from smaller additions to farm-held inventories of crops and livestock. Realized net income was $1,555.5 million in 1970, 10.4 per cent below 1969.

Everybody in Act . . . As Film Directors

By A. H. WEILER

And if these distinguished actors can move to the other side of the camera, why shouldn't Stacy Keach? Well, that's just what he is doing. Recently, a short which Keach directed, wrote and starred in was shown on TV's "The American Dream Machine." It was called "The Repeater" and it dealt with the plight of prisoners. Now he is ready to make his directorial debut on a feature-length film — an adaptation of Comarc McCarthy's novel, "Outer Dark." Keach has already written the screen play, in collaboration with Michael Thomas.

" 'Outer Dark' is a gothic horror story set in Appalachia," said Keach, who is currently starring in the Off Briadway revival of "Long Day's Journey Into Night." "It's about a brother and sister, who have an incestuous relationship. The girl has a baby, who is then stolen from her, and much of the film will be involved with her search for her child, and her brother's search for her."

Melvin Van Peebles the black writer, director and star of the current "Sweet Sweetback's Baadasssss Song," stopped off the other day to tell us about his next movie. It's going to be called "Don't Play Me Cheap," and it's based on Van Peebles's "Harlem Party," a play which was performed at the Liege Theatre Festival in Belgium several years ago.

" 'Don't Play Me Cheap' is a comedy," Van Peebles said. "I hate to say it's black comedy, because that's too literal. It deals with two black imps who were born white but who have sold their souls to the devil and, in order to win their horns in their major subject, which is party-pooning, they come down to earth on a mission to mess up a Harlem party. Their efforts end in disaster. I suppose you can say the movie illustrates that the power of evil is in the mind of the observer."

Van Peebles' new film will be financed and distrubuted independently. Shooting should begin on location in Harlem this fall.

World's Big Cats Face Extinction

Experts estimate 40,000 tigers lived in the jungles of India 25 years ago. Only 2,500 remain, saved when the Indian government banned tiger hunting and trade in tiger skins.

Once plentiful in the Amazon Basin of South America, he jaguar has so declined that zoologists must travel hundreds of miles to find one.

In short, the big cats of the world—lions, tigers, cheetahs, leopards, jaguars, and others —are rushing toward extinction. Unless something is done, and soon, zoologists warn, the cats will join the dodo bird and passenger pigeon as museum relics.

That was the grim picture painted here recently when more than a dozen big cat experts from India, Africa, Europe, Canada and the United States gathered to assess the future of the felidae.

NEAR EXTINCTION

"The large predators have reached the twilight of their existence," said Dr. George Schaller, a zoologist with the New York Zoological Society and Rockefeller University who spent three years studying lions in Africa.

"Shot for so-called sport, in demand by the fur industry, trapped and poisoned because they kill deer, livestock and other animals in which man has vested interest, the tiger, leopard, cheetah, and others have been so ruthlessly exterminated in recent years that their future is not assured.

It's not too late to preserve the big cats, the scientists agreed. But it will be a difficult task involving international agreements with emerging nations where economic growth often takes priority over saving endangered species of wildlife.

The biggest obstacle is human population growth. In Africa, India, Asia and South America, expanding population is consuming more and more forests and grasslands, robbing the cats of native habitats and prey animals.

MUST EAT CATTLE

The Asiatic lion, for example, shares its sanctuary with several thousand humans and must prey on farmers' cattle. But groups of scavengers, members if India's "untouchables" caste, are alert for lion kills and quickly move in, driving the lions away. They take the hide and meat of the kill, leaving the remains for vultures.

As a result, cubs are starving and the lion population declining.

A more immediate threat, especially to the spotted cats is the demand for coats made of their skins.

Although most countries have laws protecting their cats, poaching continues. A poacher can sell a leopard skin for $50, as much money as many Africans make in a year. Several skins sewn into a coat might fetch $5,000.

The trade in illicit skins and demand for coats, widespread in the mid-1960s, are slowly being choked off, the cat experts reported.

Six Countries Clear Irradiated Food

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Six countries have cleared irradiated foods for human consumption, ranging from strawberries to meat, the International Atomic Energy Agency reports.

Irradiation is used to kill insect, prevent sprouting, slow spoilage or stop it altogether. The countries allowing it are Canada, the Soviet Union, the United States, Israel, The Netherlands and Spain.

The Soviet Union was the first to do so. In 1958 it decided that potatoes irradiated with cobalt 60 to prevent sprouting were fit to eat.

The Russians also allow the eating of grain, dried fruits and dry food concentrates treated for insects.

They have permitted the consumption of experimental batches of onions irradiated to prevent sprouting and of eviscerated poultry, fried meat and raw beef, pork and rabbit irradiated to slow spoilage.

Canadians first cleared irradiated potatoes for eating in 1960 and also allow the consumption of irradiated onions and wheat.

Americans since 1963 have cleared irradiated wheat and potatoes.

Police Open House

The force will also stage a Canadian Police Week open golf tournament May 13 at Cedar Hill.

The events will combine centennial nostalgia with the general theme of respect for law and order in Canada, Deputy Chief R. A. Peterson said Tuesday.

Displays at the shopping centre will open at 9:30 a.m. Monday and close at 5:30 p.m. The times are the same Tuesday.

Mayor Hugh Curtis will formally open the displays at 2 p.m. Monday. From Wednesday to Friday the events will be open from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Movies, defence exhibitions, uniforms and pictorial history of the force since 1906 are all part of the displays.

Other sections include firearms, traffic devices, fingerprinting, a radar car and a breathalyzer machine.

The police station will have hourly tours between noon and 9 p.m. Saturday, May 15 and 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday, May 16. Tours can be arranged by phoning the department.

Sinclair In Good Condition

TORONTO (CP) — Gordon Sinclair, well-known writer and broadcaster, was listed in good condition today in the coronary unit of Toronto Western Hospital.

A hospital spokesman said "He's coming along fine," but declined to say whether Mr. Sinclair had had a heart attack.

Mr. Sinclair, 70, was admitted to Toronto Western Hospital Monday after complaining that he felt weak and ill, it was reported Tuesday.

Fellow workers at Radio station CFRB said Mr. Sinclair was expected to undergo checks for two or three days. They said there was no evidence of a heart attack.

Hospital officials said Mr. Sinclair was in fair condition after "a good night" Monday.

'NO LACK OF GOOD LEADERS'

Marchand Wants Indians in Senate

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Now is the time and the Senate is the place for the next big push towards full participation by Indians in national affairs, Leonard Marchand (L—Kamloops-Cariboo) believes.

"I would like to see Prime Minister Trudeau appoint three Indians to the Senate now because there still is a lot of work to be done, and that would be a useful place to tackle some of it," he said in an interview.

There are 15 vacancies in the Senate, including the Alberta seat opened recently by retirement of Hon. James Gladstone, a Blackfoot from the Lethbridge area, who became the first treaty Indian summoned to the Senate 14 years ago.

Marchand, himself the first Indian MP, has decided to write Trudeau outlining the reasons he feels would justify appointment of a battery of recognized Indian leaders as senators.

The 37-year-old research scientist hasn't made much news as an Indian in the Commons because he lives up to his campaign promise three years ago that he would be the political representative in Ottawa for all his B.C. constituents, white and red.

He isn't downgrading the Commons as a forum. In fact he's encouraging several promising young men to run for federal office, but he feels that all MPs must make it on their merits as representatives of their constituencies and not as spokesmen for particular interests.

ADVANTAGES

This constraint doesn't bind the Red Chamber and Indian senators would be free to speak as statesmen rather than parochial politicians on Indian matters.

Another advantage would accrue from the fact that they were appointed and not elected — no one would be under the misapprehension that their views bound the Indian community which itself is carrying on numerous internal dialogues.

Problems and possibilities could be aired freely and intelligently to help both races form a consensus of their own through dialogue without suspicion of forked-tongue pressuring.

"We could use some strong Indian voices in our political system and there's no lack of good Indian leaders in all provinces who could articulate the problems and solutions worth considering," said Marchand.

"So I would like to see Trudeau appoint at least three Indians to the Senate now to start the discussions going."

HARD-WORKING

Marchand has distinguished himself as a hard-working freshman MP submerged in constituency matters and service on parliamentary committees, rising only periodically to speak sharply on Indian matters after carefully choosing time and target so he doesn't waste any shots.

He decided to fire off the current volley after returning from a fact-finding mission to New Zealand and Australia a month ago as a member of the parliamentary committee on Indian affairs and northern development.

He was impressed with the success of the New Zealand system which reserved four parliamentary seats for Maori representatives from the very beginning of self-government there.

"It made a great contribution to the Maoris' participation in the over-all society by giving them a direct political role and influence right from the start," he said.

It helped greatly in developing the mutual respect between whites and natives and the eventual full partnership.

'TOO LATE'

Marchand says the same system might have given Canada a happier history but it's too late to turn back the clock and he would oppose any special status seats in the Commons. Even in New Zealand, he pointed out, there is a debate now whether the Maori seats should be abolished since tolerance is so ingrained that it's felt more Maoris would be elected if allowed to contest seats at large.

However, many of the advantages and none of the disadvantages of the New Zealand system are available now in Canada through Senate appointments, he hopes to persuade Trudeau.

Marchand picked up more ammunition for another idea among the aborigines of Australia where state funds have helped establish special pre-school programs for children between three and five years of age.

They are taught some of the language and cultural background of their own people — by aborigine teachers and teacher-aides — as a jumping-off platform for formal education.

Marchand said he was impressed with the program's results in instilling pride of their heritage at a crucial period in their lives and hopes the Indian affairs committee's current study on educational problems will be broadened to promote similar programs in Canada.

Environment 100 To Show Film On Coal Mining

That's the Price, a National Film Board film showing the effects of a coal mining operation, will be shown at a public education program sponsored by Environment 100, May 13, at 8 p.m. in Elliot 167, University of Victoria.

Discussing the film will be a panel including representatives from Kaiser Resources, the department of mines, T. R. Warburton of the Uvic anthropology and sociology department, and Dr. Ronald Hoppe of the Uvic psychology department.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

THE CAR OF THE YEAR GIVES YOU A CHANCE OF A LIFETIME.

MONEYMILES SWEEPSTAKES

You could win up to $30,000.

Before we get on to the Sweepstakes (there's more to life than just money), you should know a little more about Vega winning Motor Trend Magazine's "Car of the Year" award.

It's probably the first time in history that the Car of the Year has been four cars. Or, more accurately, one Hatchback Coupe, one 2-dr Sedan (shown), one Kammback Wagon and one Panel Express.

While you could argue (but not with us) that Vega deserved the award on looks alone, there's much more to it (them) than just a neat little package.

Take the engines. There are two; both 4-cylinder, 2300 cc, overhead cam. One offers 90 gross H.P., (net 80 H.P.), the other, 110 gross H.P., (net 93 H.P.). They're die-cast from a unique aluminum/silicon alloy and they're very strong for their weight.

Strong for pep and power. So while Vega is a great little car for nipping about downtown, it can also hold its own on the highway and up long, steep hills.

Now a car with lots of go needs lots of stop. Check. Vega has front disc brakes as standard equipment.

Up top, you have GM's exclusive double-panel steel roof for golden silence. The side-guard door beams are a popular safety feature that GM thought of first. OK. OK. We'll talk about the money!

Look for that Moneymiles Sweepstakes sign at participating Chevy dealers. When you see it, go in and ask how you can win up to $30,000. No purchase is necessary. Just go in and ask.

And if there's a Vega on the dealer's lot, go in that, too. Take a little test-drive. Have a little fun for our money!

GM MARK OF EXCELLENCE

City's Musical 'Cream' Draws Plenty of Bravos

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Those in the large McPherson Playhouse audience who had not attended the competitive sessions of the Greater Victoria Music Festival were given a fine sampling of the "cream" Tuesday night.

Twenty-one artists and two choirs performed, ages ranging from six—tiny pianist Geoffrey Jay—to some over sixties. It's significant too to record that this cream did not leave skim milk behind.

There were plenty of performers—probably at least enough for another couple of concert programs—whose quality is equal to those heard Tuesday.

HIGHLIGHT

The highlight performers included Rose Bowl winning soprano Nan Long, superbly accompanied by Charles Palmer, singing Haydn's With Verdure Clad, and entrancing pianist and City Medallion winner Kwok May-Ling playing the Chopin Ballade in G minor.

Others—and all in their own way and on their level, exceptional—were pianists Joselyn Abbott, Walter Prossnitz and Roger Scobie; violinists Stephen Calder, John Rigby (Congress of Strings winner) and the violin-viola duo of Nancy Meredith and Elizabeth Bredberg.

The extraordinarily lovely voice of 16-year-old Helen Wilson singing an unaccompanied Scottish folk song and charming ensembles consisting of duettists Hilary Groos and Mary Chard and the trio of Jennifer Angus, Roger Beavan and Robin Powell, represented the festival's vocal classes.

MAD SCENE

Rosalind Scott doing Ophelia's mad scene from Shakespeare's Hamlet and Susan Donald in a scene from O'Neill's Long Day's Journey Into Night, were the speech artists.

Oboeist Sandra Pumphrey, and trombonist Bruce Hoadley, were selected from woodwind and brass classes.

One of the surprises of the evening, showing the range of the music festival, was Eric Roberts, whose fine voice and presence aided by costume and makeup, provided a lively glimpse of musical comedy.

From Fiddler on the Roof, he sang and acted If I Were a Rich Man.

Arion Male Choir was given the honor of opening the concert and the ensemble gave a special dignity to O Canada and their competition number, Gounod's Soldiers' Chorus.

Bravos and shouts for "more" rang out more than once during the evening.

The Village Squires received some of this ovation, their Victorian era costuming (grey bowlers, red waistcoats and dogwood boutonnieres), perfect discipline and superb close harmony in two sentimental ballads of the good old days, setting the audience alight.

Spectacular Smash

Two men were injured Tuesday in the spectacular crash of a sports car at the intersection of Richmond and Mayfair in Saanich at about 9:45 p.m.

Rodney Bieller, 19, of 1456 St. Patrick, was driving north on Richmond when he apparently lost control of his late model convertible, slamming into a power pole on the northeast corner of the intersection.

Bieller, who was trapped in the wreckage for about 20 minutes before being freed by ambulance attendants, Saanich police and firemen, was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

He was in good condition this morning with back injuries and cuts.

Gordon Gowland, 23, 435 Michigan, passenger on the side of the car in collision with the power pole, escaped with minor head injuries and was treated and released Tuesday night.

Saanich police said Bieller's car skidded 193 feet from the intersection of Knight and Richmond before smashing broadside into the power pole.

Exchange Wins Grant

A centennial exchange involving six students from Victoria and six from Charlottetown P.E.I., has received a $2,000 grant from the secretary of state's department.

Another grant of $2,500 went to the Claremont Senior Secondary choir which will make singing tour of southern England and Wales this summer.

A $7,150 grant to Oak Bay Senior Secondary band covered costs of an exhange with Fisher Park High of Ottawa.

President Named

Dr. Edgar Efrat, a University of Victoria political science professor, was elected president of the Pacific Northwest Political Science Assocation at the association's annual convention in Tacoma.

CABLE-TV PROPOSAL

Black Out U.S. Commercials?

American commercials on Canadian cable television systems could be blacked out in two years, Les Curran, president of the Victoria Cablevision Ltd., said today.

Curran, who returned Tuesday from a week-long Canadian Radio-TV Commission hearing in Montreal, said his company's proposal to substitute American with Canadian commercials caused considerable interest at the hearing.

His company called for an experimental program in both Victoria and Vancouver. Although the idea is not new—it was among many suggestions made by the CRTC in February as a prelude to the Montreal hearing—Victoria's bid for an experiment took the CRTC, cable system operators and regular TV broadcasters by surprise.

The Victoria proposal was made at the first session of the hearing and Curran said the initial reaction was that such substitution would be illegal.

But later the feeling became general that copyright and other legal difficulties could be overcome.

Eventually, B.C. Television, owners of CHAN in Vancouver and CHEK in Victoria, called for an immediate test.

But the CRTC ruled that it wanted lawyers to check all aspects of the idea. A final view would be given in a post-hearing statement in the fall.

Curran is confident that commercial substitution could be as close as two years away. He said it would allow a local TV station owner to increase his rate card for commercials. The resulting extra revenue could prevent stations that are now marginal from folding. It could also help improve Canadian programming.

Curran said local TV stations are said to get as much as 80 per cent of their revenues from national commercials. He said some big U.S. advertisers have stopped national commercials in Canada because their U.S. commercials are being seen here on cable systems.

He said it was apparent at the hearing that blackout of U.S. programs or channels on Canadian cable television would be highly unlikely.

His company's licence expires Dec. 31 and there was no indication at the hearing when the CRTC would hear an application for renewal.

Higher Debt Tax Levy Boosts Oak Bay Mills

Oak Bay council set the municipality's general and debt tax levy at 37.58 Tuesday night, an increase of 2.79 mills.

The increase was approved in spite of the objections of aldermen Brian Smith and Shirley Dowell. It means that, with the increase of 1.36 mills from the school board, Oak Bay ratepayers face a total increase of 4.15 mills.

Tuesday, Smith maintained his position that home-owners should not be asked to pay more than a four-mill increase because of the present economic climate and its effect on those with fixed incomes.

SMITH

Treasurer Ian Forster told council that, providing there had been no increase in assessment, the owner of an "average" home — $20,000 to $25,000 — could expect an increase of between $26 and $28.

This would be partially offset by the $10 increase in the home-owner's grant.

The general and debt tax levy was raised .2 mills Tuesday night as the result of bids coming in for the construction of senior citizens' centre and library being approximately 10 per cent higher than anticipated.

Part of this was absorbed in the budget — .2 mills or approximately $10,000 — and the rest will be raised by short-term borrowing.

KINDER

While agreeing with Smith that the mill rate should be kept below four mills if possible, both Ald. John Goult and Douglas Watts maintained that it is "kinder on the people we are trying to protect" to have a small increase now, rather than face exorbitant acceleration later.

Ald. Norman Pimlott pointed out that most of the increase is due to salaries and impossible to avoid.

Of this, 37.58 mills will be for general and debt purposes, 31.98 will be for schools, .43 mills, unchanged from last year, for hospitals, and .01 mills for the Municipal Finance Authority. The latter is down from last year's .02.

The total tax levy last year was 65.85 mills.

Brewery Unwilling to Enter Bottle Battle

A major Canadian brewery company supports a province-wide campaign against the use of non-standard beer bottles, Elton A. Anderson, vice-president of the Federation of British Columbia Naturalists, said Tuesday.

In a letter to the federation, D. J. McDougall, vice-president of Labatt Breweries, said the company shared the federation sentiments with respect to the introduction of "private-mold" beer bottles.

"If the general public is as sensitive to major sociological and economic issues as you are, then things will return to normal in due course," McDougall wrote.

"We hope so, as we would not want to introduce our own bottle which, you will appreciate, we might be forced to do should this unfortunate first entry prove successful," he added.

Anderson said Labatt's was asked for its views on the subject after Carling Breweries Ltd. earlier this year introduced and marketed a keg-shaped bottle.

The company replied that the opening of the brewing industry to bottle-shape competition was in ecological terms a "retrograde step."

It pointed out the return of empties has been made less efficient because bottles and cartons are no longer interchangeable from brewer to brewer.

The comapany also warned that if bottle shape is allowed to become a major marketing tactic, then the brewing industry would not be able to maintain stable prices.

Parking Bylaw Gets Second Look

Oak Bay council decided Tuesday to take another look at its controversial bylaw prohibiting parking of commercial vehicles in residential areas after hearing from 30 protesters.

Brian Banyard, 2296 Cadboro Bay, asked, "Do I have to buy another car in order to go home?"

Others objected on the grounds that while residents were banned from parking commercial vehicles, they had seen municipal trucks breaking the bylaw.

NO ANSWERS

Lawrence Mann, 3621 Crestview, said he had applied for a permit and "because I applied I was charged."

He said he had written to police and municipal officials and received no answers.

In other business, council supported Campbell River's criticism of air-sea rescue facilities.

Ald. John Goult said it was "a bloody disgrace" that rescue facilities at Comox were only manned five days a week, or eight hours a day.

Ald. Douglas Watts agreed that "the whole system doesn't seem to be efficient."

Ald. Brian Smith said there was a "macabre similarity" between the recent tragedy at Campbell River and the drownings that took place off Beechey Head in March.

Council decided not to adopt a recommendation by the Intermunicipal Committee that half a mill be used for grants and donations.

WORTHWHILE

Goult said each application should be judged individually.

"If you're going to tie yourself down to half a mill it might well be that some worthwhile organization is going to suffer."

Council also:

- Accepted an E. J. Hunter Ltd. bid of $356,893 for construction of the senior citizens' centre and library.
- Agreed that the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control's request for a bylaw governing air pollution was impossible to carry out and that such restrictive measures should be made on at least a regional level.
- Decided to take steps toward collective bargaining with other core municipalities on wage negotiations once the current negotiations are completed.

HOME GARDEN

Emphasis on Shrub Plantings

By HILDA BEASTALL

Every garden owner has a dream at some time during life of enjoying a "finished" garden — one not requiring the addition of even one more plant. This sort of dream is doomed to short duration. Gardeners being versatile, change their minds and their plants.

Hilda

Just now the emphasis is on beautiful shrub plantings which will be carefree enough to encourage more concentration of effort in vegetable or fruit gardening.

The choice to be made among flowering shrubs during April and May will be a difficult one, for only an acreage could possibly contain a representative collection. Startling colors, even before the advent of rhododendrons and azaleas, are not lacking.

Perhaps one of the best shrubs is a hybrid Berberis called Orange King. An evergreen with upright straight canes, the brilliant orange flower buds have been visible since early April. The color of fresh Valencia orange skins, these berberis flowers keep their decorative value over six weeks at least.

Berberis make a splendid boundary hedge in open areas, for most are prickly. An assortment of flower colors in clear yellow to apricot-orange, true orange and shades of scarlet orange would provide their own hybrids in time by way of seedlings.

Just now coming into bloom is sweetly fragrant Daphne Burkwoodi var. Somerset. This four-foot deciduous daphne must surely be one of the more durable of the genus. It has grown from its one-inch-long cutting of 20 years ago until today its hundreds of flat pink flower clusters spread five feet wide.

It has survived several low-temperature winers and all the northeast winds imaginable.

Another brilliant shrub for the spring garden is a good named variety of the native flowering currant, Ribes sanguineum. You will like King Edward VII or Pulborough Scarlet, both vivid and long in bloom.

White, double and tiny are the blooms of Spiraea prunifolia. This makes a fine shrub for flower color in spring, and again for its flame-colored foliage in the fall.

Even these few shrubs will be sufficient for spring interest in the garden of average size.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

At rubber bridge, the defenders' sole objective is to defeat declarer's contract. At times, in so trying, they might give declarer a present of an inconsequential overtrick.

In duplicate bridge, on the other hand, since scoring is on a relative basis, the making of an overtrick by declarer can give the defenders a very poor score on the deal. This will result if, when the deal is replayed, the other defenders, playing against the identical contract, do not permit the making of the overtrick.

Thus it frequently happens in a duplicate game that the defenders will concede declarer his contract, especially when, from the bidding, it appears that the contract is unbeatable. In so doing — that is, by not making, for example, an aggressive lead in order to try to defeat the contract — they often prevent him from making that oh-so-important overtrick. Today's deal, which arose in a duplicate game, illustrates this point.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

North's jump-shift response of three clubs showed an excellent hand. When South then rebid three notrump, North raised to four notrump. This latter bid was an invitation to South to bid a small slam if he held more than a minimum hand. South, feeling that he had just about a minimum opening bid, declined the slam invitation.

As West correctly interpreted the North-South bidding, they rated to be close to a small slam, with surely at least 29-30 points between them. And West was looking at 10 high-card points. From his position — West's — East figured to have no high cards whatsoever.

So West concluded that if he made the "normal" lead of his fourth-highest spade, he might well give declarer a present of a spade trick, and possibly a couple of overtricks. He was right: with a spade lead, South would have made all 13 tricks: three spades, six clubs and four diamonds (with West's jack of diamonds falling on the second lead of the suit).

After having opened the heart king, and seeing the dummy, West promptly cashed his ace of hearts. Thus declarer made just 11 tricks, and East-West secured an excellent result on the deal. Again, if West had led a spade originally he would never have made his ace and king of hearts.

Fun with Figures

By TATE HUNTER

Charlie opened his wallet. "This morning you told me you had exactly five dollars, he said.

"I know, but I got you those three ties since then, and that left me only eighty cents," replied Linda. "The green cost a third as much again as the blue, and the blue costs a third as much as the other two together."

What were the three prices?

(Answer tomorrow)

Toll Reduced

MASSENA, N.Y. (AP) — Officials of the St. Lawrence Seaway sharply reduced toll charges for certain types of cargo in a move aimed at increasing seaway use. The change reduced to 40 cents a ton from 90 cents the toll charge for bulk cargo carried in containers or on pallets. Previously this type of cargo had been classified as general cargo and assessed at the 90-cents-a-ton rate.

GIRL VOWS TO WEAR RING

SOUTHWELL, England (CP) — Delene Atkins, 14, given an engagement ring by a 19-year-old boy-friend, proudly wore it to school but was ordered home by the principal. The order, enforcing a school ban against jewelry in class, meant an eight-mile walk home for Delene in the absence of buses. But she vows she'll go on wearing the ring.

Funeral service in McCall Bros. FAMILY CHAPEL on Friday, May 7, at 1:00 p.m., with the Rev. Dr. E. M. Smiley officiating. Interment at Royal Oak Burial Park.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to thank all the people for their kindness to me during my stay in Gorge and St. Joseph's Hospitals. A special thanks to the Nurses and Staff of the Gorge Hospital and also Dr. Conn.— Mrs. Anne Kathan.

★ ★ ★

THE MEN FROM SHILOH. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun.) This is Lee Majors' segment. As Tate, he comes to the aid of German settlers, whose rights are being punctured by intolerant local ranchers. Some good performances from experienced actors Kurt Kasznar, Brock Peters and Susan Strasberg.

★ ★ ★

THE SMITH FAMILY. 8:30 p.m., Channel 2. (Rerun.) It's another pot plot. A one-time friend of Detective Chad Smith (Henry Fonda) discovers her daughter's marijuana supply in their apartment. She needs Smith's help to straighten out the girl. Smith arrives and finds his own daughter in the apartment. June Vincent and Heather Manzies are guest stars as mother and daughter.

★ ★ ★

JUNIOR MISS PAGEANT. 9 p.m., Channel 5. With Ed McMahon and Anita Bryant as hosts, 50 high school seniors gather in Mobile, Ala., tonight for the annual selection of the fairest of them all. Beauty is not the only attribute to success. Scholastic achievement, fitness and poise also count.

★ ★ ★

MEDICAL CENTRE. 9 p.m., Channel 12. (Rerun.) Viewers get a chance to see beautiful Dana Wynter in one of her rare TV appearances. It's an eerie episode with Miss Wynter somewhat out of character as the leader of a campus witchcraft cult that doesn't believe in conventional medical practices. It reaches a real crises when a coed becomes ill and Miss Wynter insists on her witchcraftery powers to heal the girl.

★ ★ ★

YOUNG LAWYERS. 10 p.m., Channel 4. (Rerun.) What we have here is a generation flap, young Lew Fulton (Tim O'Connor) is accused of possessing marijuana. While young lawyer Aaron Silverman believes he's innocent, the boy's father (played by John Rubinstein) thinks his son is guilty, and demands he be punished. Marsha Hunt plays the mother.

★ ★ ★

SAN FRANCISCO INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT 10 p.m., Channel 5. (Rerun.) Not pot, but protest and threatened violence represent relevency. Robert Weber plays a controversial general and airport manager Jim Conrad (Loyd Bridges) gets word of not only a demonstration but also a possible attempt on the general's life. Jim has to make sure he's well-protected.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30, Channel 12: Buchanan Rides Alone (1958 western), Randolph Scott, Craig Stevens. Rugged western with strong plot, good cast and generally far more interesting than usual western film fare.

8:30, Channel 8: The Long Ships (English-Yugoslavian, 1963 adventure), Richard Widmark, Sidney Poitier. The son of a Viking shipbuilder sails in search of a legendary gold bell.

9:30, Channel 7: Gambit (1966 comedy), Shirley MacLaine, Michael Caine. Excellent film. Be forewarned, the plot fluctuates between subtle comedy, out-and-out spoofing and serious business.

12:00, Channels 6 and 8: The Winslow Boy (British, 1949 drama), Robert Donat, Margaret Leighton. Literate, wonderfully well-acted drama involving a lawyer engaged to defend a boy accused of stealing at school.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

I have had many highly nervous women come to me complaining that they had a great deal of pain around their tail bone. One of them, in fact, had had the little tail bone removed, but that had not helped at all. It was not much comfort for me to tell the person that I had seen a few dozen women like her who had had the tail bone removed and not a single one had received any benefit.

Another thing I could tell these women was that when I reached up with the finger through the rectum, and moved the tail bone around, it did not cause pain, which showed me that there was little chance of there being any arthritis or other disease in any of the joints in the little tail.

After years of seeing these people with a painful tail bone region, my strong impression is that the pain is produced in some nervous way; it is perhaps what some doctors would call a neuralgia.

I have seen other people with similar pains around the rectum or anus, but with no sign of local disease, and again, it would seem that these must be "neuralgic" pains. They can be treated with local pain relievers.

Experience has shown that it is generally best to leave a painful tail bone of this type alone, because usually its surgical removal fails to give the patient the relief she desires.

THE MOST SPECTACULAR VIEWS
IN THE UPLANDS
Are yours from practically any point in the fully sprinklered grounds of this modern bungalow or from most of the rooms in the house. Main floor accommodation consists of sunken living room, dining room and kitchen with full house length sundeck overlooking the Yacht Club, plus master bedroom, bathroom and small den. An open stairway leads down to the lower level with recreation room and three bedrooms, all facing the water and having ground level access. This is not a large home and may well be on the small side, but the setting is such and the site so superb and beautifully landscaped that the value has to be in excess of the asking price of only $55,000. For a personal tour, call JACK MEARS, 598-3321.

Mounties Ease Wait

Enthusiastic youngsters and a crew of firm but grinning Mounties gave an atmosphere of fun to otherwise routine proceedings at Victoria International Airport Tuesday evening as the Royal Party returned from up-Island visits.

The children, mostly young and uninhibited, lined the runways along with a crowd that ranged up to six and seven deep waiting for Princess Anne to return from Tofino and the Queen and Prince Philip from Nanaimo.

Armed with flags and obviously impressed by the Mounties, the youngsters were generally co-operative in heeding orders to stay back off the tarmac.

But every time a plane landed, and there were several, the children would surge forward onto the airstrip and then get herded back again by stern-looking policemen with twinkles in their eyes.

When Princess Anne finally climbed out of the RCMP Otter that flew her back from Long Beach, pausing to speak with the pilots, she got a cheer. Then another one when she paused at her limousine to wave to the crowd.

They were rewarded with only a fleeting glimpse of the princess as she got out of her official car on the opposite side to the crowd, gave a brief smile and a wave and headed to the aircraft, walking aboard without further notice of the spectators.

B.C. Has Francophone Flavor in 5 Communities

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Even British Columbians may be surprised to find the province has definite francophone flavoring in five communities.

The bilingual districts advisory board certainly was as its 111-page book of recommendations to the government revealed when tabled in the Commons Tuesday.

"If the board had blindly depended on statistical facts of 1961, it might well have entirely overlooked the west coast province," the board's report said.

"However, a more careful 'on-the-spot' study revealed the viability of a bilingual district in the municipality of Coquitlam which includes Maillardville."

That alone shouldn't be any surprise in B.C. where the existence of the unincorporated community of Maillardville as a centre of the French fact in the far west was discovered several years ago after the B. and B. Commission recommended creation of bilingual districts.

The board certainly was pleased with its find because it enabled it to recommend bilingual districts — a total of 37 — in all 10 provinces of Canada.

It noted that the 1961 census showed 3,229 or 11.1 per cent of Coquitlam district's 29,053 residents were French-speaking, easily putting it over the 10 per cent threshold for defining a bilingual district.

But British Columbians probably will be surprised to learn the board is betting that four more communities — on Vancouver Island and in the north — will jump over that threshold when the new census is taken starting June 1.

PORT ALBERNI?

"Our personal observations, even if they are not supported by statistical data, convinced us that there is an increase in the francophone population in the cities of Dawson Creek, Prince George, Terrace and Port Alberni," the board said.

"We therefore refer these areas to the next board which will have at its disposal the census figures of 1971."

It's interesting that while Maillardville is a long-settled community in the fully-developed lower mainland, the burgeoning new francophone areas are in the rapidly-growing resource communities of the hinterland.

The 11-member board made only two personal visits to B.C. It dropped in on Maillardville and Coquitlam June 24 last year and visited Victoria last March 1.

Only one of the 10 board members lives in B.C. — Dr. W. H. Hickman, professor of French language and literature at the University of Victoria.

PUB REGULARS ATTEND BURIAL

CLACTON-ON-SEA, England (UPI)—When a brewing company decided to phase out one of its products, the regulars at the Imperial Hotel thought the occasion called for something special.

So they buried the last 18-gallon barrel of the stuff with full honors. Twenty regulars paraded the empty barrel though village streets and then, with heads bowed, watched as two pall bearers buried it in the hotel's beer garden.

'THIS AD INSULTS WOMEN' STINGING REBUKE GIVEN

TORONTO (CP)—A woman advertising executive today blasted the Canadian advertising industry for depicting women as kitchen lackeys, sexual candy for men and as "a sort of white Stepin Fetchit."

Katherine McGillivray, director of public relations for Allied Chemical Canada Ltd, in Montreal, told an Association of Canadian Advertisers seminar the picket signs are going up already—"This ad insults women."

"Have you ever stopped to think of the over-all picture you people present of Canadian womanhood?" Mrs. McGillivray asked the advertising executives.

"A sort of white female Stepin Fetchit, a lackey chained to her kitchen, with underarms like the Sahara, her scalp as flakeless as a billiard ball, breathing hexachlorophene over the Man from Glad . . .

50 PER CENT WORK

Mrs. McGillivray said her industry doesn't seem to realize that 50 per cent of North America's working-age women are actually out working.

"Half the women in the country are simply not at home when The Fag with a Bag—I mean the Man from Glad—drops in. They're at their desks, their factory benches, or their seats in the board room."

She added that about half the white-collar jobs in the country are held by women, 50 per cent of all department store executives are women and women hold no less than 37 per cent of all professional and technical jobs.

"So you're talking to engineers, accountants, lawyers, doctors. And who do you send to bring the message? Mr. Clean—a bald-headed eunuch with a ring in his ear."

HELD IN CONTENT

Mrs. McGillivray said that the contemporary advertising approach "holds 53 per cent of its customers (women) in utter contempt."

"I really don't think that you are male chauvinist pigs, but I do think that you're missing out on your market," she told the predominantly male seminar audience.

"Do you really think we believe in fairies like that awful Man from Glad? Do you really think we sit at home hoping Mr. Clean and those other weirdos will drop by?"

She said that current television advertising is having a serious impact on children who start watching TV commercials "almost from the cradle."

GROSSLY DISTORTED

"As they get older they begin to understand that the most important thing in life is a dazzling floor, that the crowning glory of womanhood is an antiseptic kitchen.

"What kinds of homes are you forcing on us, with floors that mustn't be stepped on, kitchens where nobody cooks, with an atmosphere like a hospital ward.

"Correction. Somebody is allowed to cook—but only grandma, and only cake mix. You see the old bag leering over her steel-rimmed glasses."

Mrs. McGillivray said the picture the advertising industry projects of the average family is grossly distorted.

"What a crew. My grandmother the cake-mix cook. My husband Attila the Hun. My son the gobbler. My daughter the gargler. Thanks a whole lot."

She said the industry will cut its own throat by turning women off with dumb commercials. It should concentrate on showing women as "intelligent human beings—not as if we all had prefrontal lobotomies."

"Here's a cry from the heart. Stop using our flesh for money. There's a word for people who do that. Stop using our bodies as a sales aid and a merchandising gimmick.

"I personally think the Dirty Old Man approach to advertising is pretty old hat these days. Don't you?"

Restraint Programs Opposed by Smith

By CARL MOLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — Arthur Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, says the government should abandon any attempts to hold back pay and prices by voluntary or compulsory restraint programs.

The head of the federal advisory agency calls instead for positive approaches aimed at steadily-growing employment in place of negative policies that try to buck market forces.

In a 7,500-word analysis prepared for presentation today to a special Senate inquiry into Canada's economic-management policies, Mr. Smith says in effect that federal efforts for several years have been clumsy, out of date and sometimes more damaging than helpful.

His detailed study criticizes shifts in policy in the last three years—from "extremely vigorous anti-inflationary actions" in late 1968 and through 1969 to "large-scale monetary expansion" last year.

"Policy shifts are made after problems have developed or when impending problems are no longer avoidable . . . Such reactive policies run serious risks of aggravating instability and other problems."

ABSENCE OF INNOVATION

There had been an absence of major policy innovation at the centre of planning and a 1930's attitude generally in Canada towards economic management.

Mr. Smith's rejection of income-restraint programs runs counter to government efforts through the federal prices and incomes commission and warnings about the possibility of mandatory controls from Prime Minister Trudeau and John Young, chairman of the prices commission.

The advice also conflicts directly with an emphatic proposal presented to the Senate national finance committee at the opening of its special inquiry Tuesday.

Oxford University economist Sir Roy Harrod advised then that Canada should aim immediately at reasonably-full employment, followed by a compulsory freeze on pay and prices and development of a permanent program of restraint on wage rates and corporate dividends.

Mr. Smith says flatly that income-restraint policies, cutting across market forces, have not been very successful.

"Beyond incomes policies lie price and incomes controls, but these will tend to create even more problems, intervening even further with market mechanisms."

Instead, the council recommends what Mr. Smith calls reconciliation policies that would work with market forces rather than against them.

BE YOURSELF

Are you being held back by qualities or shortcomings you wish you didn't have?

If so, it may be time to learn the facts about yourself.

Where do you start? Many people are literally having their lives transformed by starting with God. They are finding that as their understanding of God grows their spiritual relationship to God becomes more apparent.

And through this they are discovering good qualities in themselves they never knew they had.

If you would like to learn what such an enlightened view of yourself can mean to your life, hear Colonel William Little of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship.

This Mothers' Day, put the shoe on the other foot for a change.

Mothers are devoted to doing nice things for their families.

So it's good that once a year, on Mothers' Day, families get the chance to do nice things for their mothers. (The shoe's on the other foot, so to speak).

To do something really different for your mother this year, treat her to a nice, new pair of Kinney shoes. Kinney has a great selection of summer fun sandals for mothers from $4.99 to $12.99.

Now, wouldn't that be a memorable way of telling your mother, "Thanks, for being special".

Uvic's Dr. Sewell Named UN Adviser

A member of the University of Victoria's economics and geography departments has been appointed United Nations adviser for a UN conference on the human environment in Stockholm in 1972.

Dr. Derrick Sewell, an authority on water resources management, will prepare background documents on flood control. He will go to New York this week to get specific information on the research he is to carry out.

Dr. Sewell has studied flood problems of several countries, including several rivers in Canada. He is the author of a book entitled Water Management and Floods in the Fraser River Basin and is a member of the B.C. Energy Board's advisory committee on floods, which is looking into the effects of the proposed Moran Dam on the Fraser.

Canada, the Soviet Union and European countries have taken the lead in setting up the conference, Sewell said. All United Nations members are expected to take part.

The conference could produce a declaration on environmental problems that would be morally, although not legally, binding on member nations. It will also spell out in specific terms how the problems should be approached, and won't attempt to minimize the dangers involved.

'I HATE TO TELL YOU THIS . . . BUT'

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Richard Riley, a U.S. treasury agent, was describing in Middlesex Superior Court the imperfections in a counterfeit $20 bill.

Judge Henry Chmeilinski pulled a $5 bill out of his pocket and asked Riley: "How does this compare with the $20 bill?"

Riley studied the bill a few seconds and said:

"I hate to tell you this — it's counterfeit."

The agent gave the judge a receipt for his $5 and told him he could deduct the loss on his next income-tax return.

ANDERSON STARTS IT SATURDAY

Marchers Should Hit Record

A record number of marchers is expected to be on hand Saturday when David Anderson, MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, starts the Miles for Millions march at Centennial Stadium.

After doing the honors at 8:30 a.m. he will join the thousands to raise funds for 21 different agencies.

The 25-mile route will have 14 checkpoints. These will be at Willows, Hollywood, Beacon Hill, Victoria West, Memorial and Craigflower Parks, Tillicum and Gorge, Carey and Tillicum, Reynolds Secondary, Cedar Hill Secondary, Mount Douglas Park, Gordon Head School and the Thomas Moore Centre.

The feeding station will be by the Craigflower Bridge on Gorge Road West.

The finish line will be at the University of Victoria's Student Union Building.

Most students have already registered in their schools for the march. Others can register at the SUB, beginning today, each day until 10 p.m. Registrations will also be taken at the stadium Saturday, beginning 7:30 a.m.

Organizers of the march have asked that parents not patrol the route looking for their children. Buses will be sent to pick up dropouts and bring them back to the university.

Residents along the route are asked to put out containers for paper and rubbish from the marchers. Organizers also say hoses with running water near the sidewalks would be appreciated by thirsty walkers.

Parents are also advised to get their children to phone and give plans for returning home, arrange a specific place if they are meeting them, and tell their children when to stop if they don't want them out after dark.

The organizers also have some tips for the walkers:

- Start slowly and gradually increase your speed to the pace you want to keep.
- Use oranges, grapefruit, tomatoes, preserved fruit, cereals, toast, honey, sugar, spaghetti, bananas or or beans as a source of carbohydrates and alkaline as foods.
- A container of well-sweetened tea will help keep you going, especially if taken with a small piece of plain chocolate from time to time.
- Chewing lemon peels will help cure a dry mouth.

Maybe If You Were Now In Florence, Spoke Fluent Italian And Knew How To Haggle Prices, You Might Find A Lower One-But We Really Doubt It

Personal Shopping Only

sale, pair 11.99

Our secret is a man who lives in Italy, speaks fluent Italian, and knows the Florentine markets like the back of his hand. You want hand-woven leather? Style? Comfort? And a really great price for your shoes? He's the man to see. And see him we did. He's the same man our Canadian buyers met at the airport in Rome. Together they discovered this beauty of a sandal buy, just for summer. And just because we all love to find a true bargain. So we made our order large enough for all our stores across Canada, kept overhead and shipping costs to a minimum to bring you the minimum price on the maximum quality of shoe. Choose yours from our three sunny styles. Shop early for the colour and size of your taste. Bravissimo for a great Italian buy.

1. City Sandal in glove-soft leather for office, shopping, nights downtown. White or beige.

2. Denim, canvas and linen are a natural accompaniment of our creped rubber sole version with woven strappings in beige or tan.

3. Chunky heel version for those sporty looks, covered in white or beige leather to match strapping on top.

TIMID CONTRIBUTION TO THE ROYAL BOUQUET was made during Duncan visit by seven-year-old Laura Beth Fielding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Fielding, Fairbridge. Laura Beth told the Queen she had picked them in her back yard, and the royal recipient said the dandelions were "just beautiful." Still a bit awestruck after the Queen had moved on, Laura Beth said Her Majesty was "nice." The more formal bouquet was yellow roses. (Bill Halkett Photo.)

Cave-In Swallows 31 People, Homes

Que. Town Asleep When Hole Opens

Times News Services

ST. JEAN VIANNEY, Que.—The banks of the "River of Broken Lands" sank into an underground stream, swallowing people, homes, bridges and vehicles in this sleeping village Tuesday night, and officials estimated today at least 31 died.

Canadian Armed Forces helicopter pilots said at noon today only two bodies had yet been recovered from thousands of tons of suffocating, slimy clay mud. Another 10 persons were plucked off homes and cars sunk into a crater a mile long and more than 100 feet deep.

Rescue workers pushed through piles of mud they described as "cold lava" today in a desperate search for trapped survivors of a massive earth cave-in near Chicoutimi.

About 70 persons, many screaming and moaning, were rescued overnight from the crater of mud and slime.

Heavy rain fell today in the area as the broken remains of a score of homes tumbled through a gorge into the Riviere des Vases, a small tributary of the Saguenay River.

EVACUATE HOMES

Neighbors and relatives of missing persons waited through the night at the edge of the gorge. Several homes were evacuated and police closed off roads to curious motorists who could see debris of homes floating at dawn in the Saguenay.

Roger Landry searched the area in vain for his wife and five children, then went to stay with relatives in Kenogami.

"It was dreadful, indescribable," he told reporters. He was in the basement of his home when the slide started shortly after 11 p.m.

He ran up to the ground floor. "I called my family until I thought my lungs would burst, but there was no answer."

Jean Boucher was driving along when suddenly the road gave way in front of him. He managed to crawl up the slippery side of the crater but told police he believed his sister-in-law was still in the pit.

A Canadian Forces helicopter pilot, sent in to undertake aerial rescue operations, described the scene as "sheer desolation."

DROP OUT OF SIGHT

Capt. Maurice Roy said a whole chunk of earth and homes simply dropped out of sight into a hole 100 to 125 feet deep.

"There are sheer walls dropping down into mud."

He dropped a leather harness to a woman who said she spent the whole night stranded on the roof of her car in the hole.

"She was in a state of shock but she managed to slip the collar over her head and we raised her up. She told us that her husband had left the car just before the road about a half-mile long dropped out of sight."

GOOD-BYE TO QUEEN FOR NEXT 6 DAYS

Victoria said goodbye to its Royal visitors for six days today when the Queen, Prince Philip and Anne took off by chartered jet for hectic visits to the B.C. interior.

Two hundred flag-waving citizens, mostly women and children, applauded from the edge of the tarmac at Pat Bay Airport as the Royal Family's chartered Boeing 737 jet took off and wheeled east, the Queen's coat of arms flapping from the cabin window of the red, yellow and silver plane.

Called one of the most hectic days of the visit by tour officials, today's schedule calls for whistle stops at Cranbrook, where the party will change to a smaller Viscount aircraft which can be accommodated at inland airfields, then on to Fort Steele, the Dunrobin area, Selkirk College, Castlegar and Penticton. Arrival time at Penticton is 5:30 p.m.

Carnival Spirit Abounds On Princess' Park Trip

TOFINO — A beach is a fun place and that's just the way it was at Long Beach Tuesday when Princess Anne officially opened the new Pacific Rim National Park on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

Princess Anne spent a cool 20 minutes on the sands and carpeted platform on the rocks and officially opened the park.

Children scamped over rocks and explored pools. A group of bead-swinging hippies enjoyed an impromptu rock session with mouth organ accompaniment. Dogs chased each other in and out of the crowd.

For Princess Anne, it was the first of two solo engagements during the 10-day centennial tour of British Columbia on which she is accompanying the Queen and Prince Philip.

After a 50-minute flight from Victoria she was driven to the park's camping ground and then walked to the beach where she met dignitaries and unveiled a dedication plaque.

★ ★ ★

Forthe men, Social Credit MLA Howard McDiarmid of Alberni set a high fashion note by sporting an Indian-style woven conical hat.

Any attempt at formality during the brief ceremony was spoiled by an inquisitive black and white dog who twice dashed onto the dais for a closer look at the proceedings.

Speeches were kept to a minimum.

Provincial Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan said the symbolic dedication of the park with its more than 90 miles of coastline and 50-plus islands "clearly establishes our joint determination that choice areas of our country shall be preserved for all time for all generations."

Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien said the Pacific Rim Park is one of five new national parks established in the last two years, symbolizing Canadians' recognition of "the need for man to concern himself with a world beyond that of material gain."

★ ★ ★

Turning to Princess Anne he added "it is especially fitting that someone of your generation, which has shown itself so aware of the values of nature and the need for conservation, should preside here today."

Chretien presented to the princess on behalf of the federal government a carving of red cedar driftwood executed by Godrey Stephens, 31, of nearby Ucluelet.

He described it as "an abstrct, free-flowing cosmic xylophone."

Most people didn't hear the princess utter a word but a few Wreck Bay hippies and children were made happy as she walked through the crowd to the helicopter.

"She asked me if I'd been living here long. She was beautiful," said the woman.

To long-haired Miles Snow, from Montreal, she smiled and said: "There could be a worse place to stay than Long Beach," and to the small children about her feet she explained that she couldn't stay because the helicopter was leaving.

Thirty members of the Sierra Club held huge signs saying "Complete the park" and "Save Tsusiat."

MP David Anderson, Esquimalt-Saanich, who thought the ceremony "a trifle too formal," was definitely behind the Sierra Club's proposal for an extension of Phase 3 in the trail zone, the Tsusiat, Hobitan watershed.

UP-ISLAND TOUR

Protect Environment Message

The royal tour began reaching into the heart of B.C. residents Tuesday with a whirlwind tour of three up-Island communities and Long Beach.

If there was a message in the comings and goings, it was directed towards protection of the environment and appreciation of the bounty it bestows.

Queen Elizabeth gave the province a centennial year pat on the back for all the pioneering that has been done in the past century or so. But she added:

"You must also look ahead and determine to continue the unending work of creating and caring for a satisfying and human existence in these splendid natural surroundings."

The royal visitors had plenty of opportunity to check out the natural surroundings first-hand. While Princess Anne was on a solo trip to the Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, the Queen and Prince Philip travelled by car to Duncan, Ladysmith and Nanaimo.

The crowd of 3,000 waited patiently around the courthouse complex at Duncan for the Queen and Philip, who arrived half an hour after their scheduled 3 p.m. appearance.

A cornerstone laid by the Queen and a golden trowel now displayed in city hall's mementoes of the visit. At the welcoming ceremonies themselves, Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife looked more regal than his visitors in flowing purple mayoral robes.

After introductions to selected Duncanites and the laying of the cornerstone for a new library, the city's senior citizen centennial project, the Queen asked Quaife if he would like to retain the trowel used. It had been inscribed to the Queen.

The mayor said he would, and promised to display it in the trophy case.

"Well, we'll consider it a loan until our next trip," Philip said.

RCMP officers estimated 15,000 people lined city streets and surrounded the courthouse area. The 6,000 around the provincial building greeted the visitors with cheers and applause under fretful, cloudy skies.

This conservative crowd, consisting of hundreds of Brownies, Guides, Cubs, Scouts, old age pensioners and a good cross-section of the community who cheered and applauded sparingly had started to slowly gather around the buildings at 10 a.m. and were still rushing in upon her arrival.

The Queen was met by Mayor Quaife in his purple velvet robes who then introduced her to chairman of the Duncan Centennial Committee Martin Lukaitis and his wife.

She then moved slowly past the crowd, stopping occasionally to speak, to where she was then introduced to Mayor of North Cowichan Gerry Smith and his mother; Mayor of Lake Cowichan Moe Ali and his wife; Cowichan Indian band chief Dennis Alphonse and his wife, MLA for Cowichan-Malahat Robert Strachan and his wife as well as other officials.

While the Queen and the Duke were working their way to the receiving line the

Trade Suspended on U.S. Dollar As Monetary Turmoil Spreads

FRANKFURT (AP) — The government banks of West Germany and five other European countries suspended trade in United States dollars today, trying to check speculators who are swapping American currency for West German marks in expectation the mark will be revalued upward.

The Canadian dollar moved up in value slightly due to trading in it in Europe, but "the market has been very calm here this morning," a Bank of Canada spokesman said in Ottawa this morning.

International monetary authorities began consulting on ways to halt the flow of U.S. dollars to Europe, creating the worst European financial crisis since 1969.

One way to stop this is to revise upward the value of the mark, and this may be considered at a meeting of the West German cabinet in Bonn on Friday.

The U.S. treasury department is ready to help. The government will offer special securities for purchase by holders of dollars in Europe, thus soaking up excess American currency.

"As necessary, the United States is prepared to raise additional funds in the Eurodollar market and to assist with appropriate investment outlets for foreign central banks," U.S. Treasury Secretary John B. Connally said in a statement.

So Let Lady Luck Work for Our Own

Under Section 179 of the Criminal Code of Canada I could be sent up the river for a two-year stretch should I admit that I've just purchased, at a price of $3, a ticket on the next Irish Hospitals' Sweepstake. So I deny it.

But if I had bought one I'd be tolerable mad, as I might be exactly four times each and every year, at the reminder of all those Canadian dollars — some guesses run as high as $200 million annually — that continue to leave our shores because of the hypocritical rejection of a perfectly logical, attractive idea.

There's not been a public opinion survey in the last 10 years that's shown less than 78 per cent Canadian support for the concept of a government-operated national lottery, yet politicians of every stripe, at every level, behave like spooked rabbits before a vocal opposition that comes almost entirely from within the religious organizations.

It is repeatedly said, for example, that hospitals in Canada could not rely on the financing that would come from such a source.

But no one who has ever seriously advocated a national Canadian lottery ever suggested that it be the sole source of revenue. In Ireland, itself, the 25 per cent of the Sweep take that goes into hospitals and medical research is simply an added bonanza that permits them to do a first-rate job that we do so badly. Anyone who has travelled in Ireland will have marvelled at the medical facilities. "Don't faint on a street corner in Connemara," you'll hear it said, "or they'll build a hospital around you before you come to."

It is repeatedly said — very often by socialist purists — that it's a dodge to take the responsibility from the well-to-do, either through taxes or charitable donations, and put it on the shoulders of the poor.

But the fact is that neither charity nor tax dollars do the job anywhere in this country. There is not a single, tax-supported hospital in Canada, so far as I know, that has enough beds. There's not a single agency within the charity-supported United Appeal that doesn't ask for less than it needs and doesn't get less than it asks.

Two hundred million bucks or half that or a quarter of it — and, remember, it's money we export with no more than an occasional token resistance — would be a dividend welcomed by every short-changed institution or service.

There are three shatter-proof arguments, in my view, that answer every objection.

The first is that we're in one already, whether we like it or not, and millions of Canadians are regularly buying tickets on the Irish and other foreign-originating lotteries. It is a point that was made in 1954 by the then Social Credit attorney-general, Robert Bonner, who had recommended to Ottawa that the Criminal Code be revised to legalize government-supervised lotteries "because a large, significant body of the public presently supports them." (Bonner went out on a limb with that recommendation and, when the Rev. Phil Gaglardi objected, the attorney-general took pains to dissociate his view from that of his party.)

Secondly, in a free enterprise economy that condones gambling at the race track or at your friendly stock-broker's shop or grain exchange or in merchandising contests or in fishing derbies or in the chance-taking of insurance or in automobile raffles, there are ready precedents, especially if the take can be used to combat some of the evils of the system.

Ireland is not alone in using such money to good advantage. Sweden, Switzerland, Austria, Mexico, France, Australia, New Zealand, even tiny Iceland, are among dozens of the nations of the world that matter-of-factly consider it a source of public revenue.

Finally, it's the opinion of a substantial, democratic majority of Canadians that a national lottery would be a harmless kind of fun in life, not to be confused with the perils of gambling and that the idle fantasy of a pot of gold is not, as the sweepstakes' opponents claim, a corrupting influence on the morals or the dedication to a constructive life by the average man. If it were a great many of my friends who regularly invest in the Irish would have long since gone down the path to hell. It seems yet another example of a certain tendency by organized religion to misunderstand the workings of human nature.

The church objection, traditionally, is that lotteries are a gamble offering inducements of something for nothing and that they would eventually become a substitute for voluntary philanthrophy, the assumption being that charity is still kissing sweet.

One well-known anti-lottery clergyman of our town put the case to me this way:

"Here is a tradesman making, let's say, $150 a week who manages to get along well on his earned income. Then one day he wins $1,000 on a $2 wager. He has suddenly taken $998 from society for which he has put nothing back. He has won over a month's income which cost him nothing in skill, service or goods. He has discovered what seems to be a short cut, a socially acceptable form of theft. Greed now enters the picture and he resolves to take advantage of every betting opportunity. He decides that a man is a fool to work so hard for so little and he begins to take his gambling more seriously. Gradually gambling becomes an obsession and society is burdened with yet another parasite or 'easy money' boy."

That may be a useful argument against horse-playing. It has no validity at all, it seems to me, as it applies to a government-run national lottery.

In a fast survey of these immediate precincts I find none of my law-breaking friends who ever buy more than a single ticket or who have anything more than a wistful hope that they'll be a winner. Everyone knows the Irish odds: one in a million for the big one, nine in a million for enough to retire on, one in 2,000 for anything. (All of these odds, by the way, are lengthened by the number of counterfeit tickets — you can tell if yours is a fake if the watermark has gone when you boil it in three parts of water to one part household soda — and by the large numbers that never reach the great, revolving drums at 13 Earlsfort Terrace, Dublin.)

It is all just a lark with an insignificant outlay, a kind of enjoyable, voluntary tax, and so the gambling greed is not triggered. A national lottery would launch a million dreams, but there's a wide distinction to be made between dreams and an obsession with something for nothing.

In my time I've interviewed a good many Irish winners. That periodic story is another argument for our own national sweep. Time after time the prize goes to put a boy or girl through university or to set up a small business or to pay off debts or to give an old couple a decent retirement.

ALDERMEN WANT STAFF CUTS

City Budget Up 19 Per Cent

Victoria council today began working over a record preliminary budget of $25,244,863, up 19 per cent from last year — with a potential tax increase of 7.92 mills.

Wages, salaries and employee benefits accounted for the greatest portion of the increase, officials said.

Accepting the new mill rate as is would mean a tax revenue increase of $1,528,827.

Although Myor Courtney Haddock tried to avoid what he called discussion of "philosophy," several aldermen persisted, saying they wanted to attack the budget with a view to cutting staff along the way.

Little actual change was made in the budget during the first morning of a three-day session.

Comptroller Jim Bramley told council reductions would be possible, "but the largest portion of the increase results from wage increases that have been either granted or provided for and other factors not under the control of the city . . ."

Bramley also said the past record of substantial increases in non-tax revenues has changed and the city's income in this area will be "relatively small."

The budget increase as it now stands is $4,047,238.

The city will suffer a $23,100 loss in revenue from the province's grants in lieu of taxes because the Eric Martin Institute now comes under the Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Bramley said the total effect of wage increases already granted this year and last is nine per cent.

General government expenses, up by almost $200,000 to an estimated $2,111,275, include a fringe benefit to all staff increase of $125,000.

Other major increases:

Fire department, up $95,230; police, up $133,698; courts, up $75,330; traffic and street lighting, up $54,895; public works, up $50,730; sanitation and waste removal, up $67,900; water distribution, up $104,875; parks, up $95,585; debts, $71,000; regional district contributions, up $19,975; special expenditures, up $145,080.

The net cost of welfare to the city is estimated at $1,059,120. This is $164,432 greater than last year's budgeted amount, but only $[illegible] more than the actual amount spent.

Bramley said even with the decrease in the municipal share of welfare costs from 21 to 15 per cent in 1971, the rise in welfare demand results in an increase in the city's welfare cost.

The mill rate was steady at 39.3 between 1966 and 1969. It dropped to 37.5 last year and with the preliminary budget is set at 45.42. With the school and hospital levies added, the mill rate levied on Victorians would come to 77.83.

Discussion sharpened today when Ald. Peter Pollen said every department should be required to produce a work study showing exactly where each employee is used.

After Pollen was cut off by Haddock, Ald. Clyde Savage said he simply did not believe that staff cuts are not possible.

Hiring a planning consultant at a cost of $10,000 last month came under fire and it was suggested that the city should pool some of its stenographic help.

Newly-Overhauled Oriole Won't Sail in Swiftsure

HMCS Oriole has been "grounded."

For the first time since 1955 the navy's 91-foot ketch won't compete in the annual Swiftsure classic May 29.

Rear-Admiral Richard Leir, comfirming an earlier Times story, said today the biggest yacht in the race will have to stay tied up for this one.

"Regretfully," said the admiral, "I have had to make the decision that Oriole will not be in the race this year. The problem is simply one of a shortage of qualified men to man her.

NEW DRAPES

"With all our commitments this year for the royal visit and the centennial programs; combined with the normal heavy summer reserve training load, we cannot spare the personnel to keep the ship in shape for racing.

"I must add that when the present refit is completed Oriole will be in good repair and, once the pressure of other commitments has been relieved, every consideration will be given to ways and means of again placing her in service."

Oriole's rigging has all been replaced, the ship rechromed and her 50-year-old steel hull brought back to her original beauty. She has new drapes and carpeting.

The admiral's decision dismayed the town's Oriole boosters.

"She's part of the whole Swiftsure picture and should be out there. She is Swiftsure — win, lose or draw."

Another sailor questioned the lack of manpower:

"There are five navy boats in refit right now. Do you mean to tell me that they can't find enough men off them to man her?"

Another said the priorities were at fault:

Rehabilitation Plan Gets Ottawa Okay

Saanich has received senior government approval for a pilot project for rehabilitation of welfare recipients, it was announced today.

The project involves two groups of 10 men for three months. It includes off-work upgrading of education and on-job work — cleaning Colquitz Creek.

"The approval came yesterday and we are hopeful it will get under way quite quickly," said Mayor Hugh Curtis. "We're extremely pleased."

Costs are to be shared, with the total cost being about $40,000 and the Saanich share about $20,000 including equipment and materials.

Purpose of the project is rehabilitation with the idea of assisting people who have been on welfare for six months to three years.

IN THE NOT-SO-MERRIE England of 1653, a gentle biographer who studied to be quiet published a book from which he plainly expected little in the way of recognition. As he explained in his preface, he had merely "made a recreation of his recreation," which happened to be fishing.

His name was Izaac Walton. The little book that ensures his immortality as long as rivers run is titled, The Compleat Angler. Today, more than three centuries after it first saw print, it remains fresh, bright and innocent as a May morning.

It's a rare spring when I don't dip into it for the reading pleasure it provides without conscious art or lofty pretensions.

The framework which Walton set up for his treatise is both sturdy and simple. A hunter, a falconer and a brother of the angle meet while trudging from London to the country. To lighten the journey, each makes a case for his sport. . .

Piscator the fisherman and you may be sure Father Izaak's face beams behind the alias — speaks so convincingly of the joys of angling that Venator the hunter yearns to learn a hitherto scorned art.

He becomes a scholar under Piscator-Walton's wholehearted tutelage, and they go fishing together.

The scholar is patient and receptive. He listens to a veritable torrent of discourse, both by the streamside and later while they wait out a shower beneath a handy tree.

"But come," says Piscator at long last, "now it hath done raining, let's stretch our legs a little in a gentle walk to the River, and try what interest our Angles will pay us for lending them so long to be used by the Trouts. . . ."

Piscator: I marry Sir, that was a good fish indeed: if I had had the luck to have taken up that Rod, then 'tis twenty to one he should not have broke my line by running to the rods end as you suffered him: I would have held him within the bent of my Rod. . . .

And so on, veteran to beginner, who charitably forebears to mention that his teacher did that same morning manage to lose a trout that broke all.

Their rods, heavy and long, were a far remove from the vibrant wands available to present anglers. They had no reels to hold their lines of plaited horsehair, although Walton had heard of these new-fangled winches.

And even though his instruction touches on artificial flies, he was much more adept in the use of the baits and lures he recommended to his scholar.

His young real-life friend, Charles Cotton — different from Walton in all respects save kindliness and love of angling — supplied knowledgeable chapters on fly-fishing to be included in a later edition of the book. It speaks for the quality of their friendship that he did so in such a way as to enhance rather than detract from Walton's reputation.

It is worth noting, too, that Walton continued to tinker with his book. Well-received from the start, it grew with the years.

The work as we find it is a compendium of songs, godly preachments, recipes, and natural history notes recorded from shrewd observation or quoted from not always reliable authorities.

But Walton is at his best when he returns his thoughts to running water and the fishes that inhabit it.

"Trust me, Scholar," he declares, "I have caught many a Trout in a particular Meadow, that the very shape and the enamell'd color of him hath been such as hath joyed me to look on him; and I have with much pleasure concluded with Solomon, everything is beautiful in his season."

The Compleat Angler, though an enduring classic, isn't to everyone's taste. You may find it tedious through much of its length. I've been told by more than one who attempted it that it bored him stiff.

But try it! You might discover in Izaak Walton a fine companion for a springtime ramble.

By The Associated Press

Minnesota tied New York Yankees on Rod Carew's home run with two out in the ninth inning Tuesday night and then beat them 6-5 on Him Holt's two-out homer in the 10th.

In another American League action, Baltimore Orioles trimmed California Angels 4-1, Boston Red Sox edged Chicago White Sox 4-3, Detroit Tigers nipped Oakland Athletics 6-5 and Milwaukee Brewers blanked Washington Senators 2-0.

Lindy McDaniel came out of the New York bullpen after the Yankees had struck for two runs in the top of the ninth to take a 5-4 lead. The veteran reliever got two quick outs before grooving a 1-2 pitch to Carew, who belted it into left centre field seats for his first homer of the season.

McDaniel retired the first two Minnesota batters in the 10th but Holt, who had entered the game as a late-inning defensive replacement, slammed a 1-0 delivery over the right field fence for his first 1971 homer.

PINIELLA ALSO HIT

Hargan was hurt after hitting Lou Piniella with a pitch and breaking the Kansas City outfielder's right thumb. Piniella is expected to be out for about three weeks.

Bruce Dal Canton scattered nine hits and received last-out relief help from Ted Abernathy as the Royals handed Hargan his fifth loss in as many decisions.

At Baltimore, Jim Palmer ran his pitching record to 5-0 with a seven-hitter as the Orioles breezed past California. Boog Powell doubled home two runs to pace the winners' attack.

HOME-RUN ROUTE

The victory kept the second-place Orioles one game behind Boston, East Division leaders, who broke a 3-3 tie with the White Sox on Phil Gagliano's bases-loaded pinch single in the seventh. Left fielder Carl Yastrzemski blunted a ninth-inning Chicago threat by nailing fleet Luis Alvarado at the plate on a single by pinch-hitter Rich McKinney.

Al Kaline drew a two-out walk in the ninth at Detroit, then raced home from first with the winning run as Jim Northup's single to right went through Reggie Jackson's legs for an error.

In the National League, San Diego Padres used the home-run route to get past Atlanta Braves, 3-2; New York Mets nipped Chicago Cubs, 2-1; St. Louis Cardinals whipped Philadelphia Phillies, 7-3; Los Angeles Dodgers blanked Cincinnati Reds, 2-0, and Pittsburgh Pirates trounced San Francisco Giants 10-2.

Nate Colbert and Clarence Gaston supplied the heroics for San Diego. Gaston delivered the game-tying home run, his second of the game, and Colbert followed with another for the winning marker. It was Gaston's fourth circuit blow and Colbert's seventh.

Mike Lum slammed a homer in the second inning to give Atlanta a 1-1 tie, then the Braves went ahead on Sonny Jackson's run-scoring single with two out in the seventh.

Bud Harrelson singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning to give New York its third straight victory and eighth in nine games. Until that juncture, the only scoring had been Bob Aspromonte's home run in the New York second and Johnny Callison's run-scoring double in the Chicago fifth.

Jose Cardenal drove in three runs with a double and homer and Jerry Reuss weaved a six-hitter for St. Louis.

TRADED to Toronto Argonauts by Calgary Stampeders is Dave Cranmer (above), 1968 rookie-of-the-year in the Western Football Conference who returned to action last season after missing entire 1969 campaign because of injuries. In exchange for Cranmer, Stamps received playing rights to defensive-back Ron Arends and offensive-back Ray Lancaster, who is now at University of Ohio.

Reading Unlucky Loser; Preston Tops Division

LONDON (CP) — Preston North End defeated Rotherham United, 3-0, Tuesday night to overtake Fulham and finish champions of Division III in the English Soccer League.

Preston, which defeated Fulham on Saturday, finally topped them by one point in the standings with the win over Rotherham. Alan Spavin, with two goals, and Dick Heppolette scored for Preston.

A 2-1 defeat by Aston Villa doomed Reading to relegation to Division IV for the first time in the club's 100-year history.

UNLUCKY GOAL

An unlucky own goal by inside forward Terry Bell dropped Reading into Division IV. Bell's moment of misfortune came in the 65th minute — just seven minutes after Dick Habbin had equalized a first-minute goal for Villa by Willie Anderson.

Going down with Reading are Bury, Doncaster and Gillingham while teams elevated from Division IV to Division III are division champion Notts County, Bournemouth, Oldham and York.

At the foot of Division IV are Lincoln, Newport, Hartlepools and Barrow, which must all apply for reinstatement.

Dropped from Division I to Division II are Burnley and Blackpool while Leicester and Sheffield United move up to take their places.

Sixth Quarterback Acquired by Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions Tuesday announced the signing of quarterback Bob Naponic, bringing to six the number of signal callers attending the Lions training camp this season.

The 24-year-old Naponic spent last year with Houston Oilers, taxi squad and was activated for the last game of the season.

He is six feet tall and weighs 200 pounds and played college football for the University of Illinois before joining the Oilers.

The Lions have also announced the signing of a special assistant coach for the 1971 training camp. Paul Davis, currently the assistant head coach at Auburn University in Alabama, will fill the position.

Royalty Spared Speeches at Lunch

By ANN DUNSMUIR

The luncheon tendered Her Majesty The Queen and the royal party by the province of British Columbia must have been a change fom the usual royal tour function.

There were, for once, no self-gratifying speeches from head table politicians — not even a mention of The Good Life, Our Booming Economy or B.C.'s Potential Development.

The usual guests shared the head table with the royal party. But if the authorities have had the sense to cut the speeches this time they may someday, somewhere consider placing Princess Anne next to an attractive young man.

The Queen and Princess Anne wore the same outfits to the luncheon Tuesday in the Empress Hotel's Crystal Ballroom that they wore to the legislatue in the morning.

Where content was concerned the luncheon was a delight. The form was another matter.

The menu must have been planned by a billiards fanatic.

The vegetables were small round green peas, tiny cherry tomatoes, and carrots operated on so that they resembled bright orange olives. It was a bit like playing pin ball — everything bounced a lot.

The main course was lively but the music definitely was not.

The musical selections chosen must have seemed stale and overly familiar when The Princess Elizabeth was in her hassinette. Played even once The Student Prince is a bit much, but it was repeated over and over along with the Gold and Silver Waltz, The Merry Widow and The New Moon for variety.

Bennett presented the Queen with a necklace and earrings made of B.C. jade and B.C. gold. He asked the Queen to accept the gift as a memento of her visit and added, "with it Ma'am go the loyalty and affection of us all."

Prince Philip and Princess Anne also received gifts of B.C. jade. Princess Anne received a bracelet of gold and jade dogwood blossoms. The prince's gift was a desk-size statue of a grizzly bear.

The Queen's gifts to the province were an oil painting of Queen Victoria as a young mother with Edward, Prince of Wales at about six years of age, and the official documents concerning the choice of the name British Columbia.

In thanking the Queen for her gift Bennett said, "We're proud of the name British Columbia and we will always remain British Columbia."

The same crowds waited throughout the lengthy luncheon to see the royal party leave.

When they emerged from the elevator Princess Anne had discarded her chic straw hat and had let down her long blonde hair.

She looked relieved and happy it was all over.

WINDBLOWN PRINCESS smiles at the crowd as she returns to the royal yacht from her visit to Long Beach. Princess Anne, is wearing the stone colored dress and jacket she wore to the luncheon. She discarded her large straw hat in favor of a head scarf for the trip to Tofino.

Formal Dinner Afloat Crowns 'Two Amazing Days'

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Premier Bennett stepped from the royal Yacht Britannia Tuesday night and called the Queen's visit to Victoria "two amazing days."

Following a dinner party by the Queen which lasted until after 11 p.m., the Britannia sailed out of the Inner Harbor for Patricia Bay where it was scheduled to stay until 10 a.m. today.

"I'm more than pleased," said the premier about the Queen's visit to the city. "It was two amazing days." The Queen's 10-day visit was "off to a wonderful start," he said.

Ladies wore long dresses to the Queen's dinner party. The Queen's gown was a heavy blue silk, and she wore a diamond necklace and diamond chaplet earrings. Princess Anne wore a high collared gown in tangerine.

The menu: "Vichyssoise, Scampi Newburg, Supreme de Volaille Morechale, Harieots Verts au Beurre, Pommes Parisiennes Salade. Mousse au Chocolat en Chemise, Biscuits."

Bennett said following the dinner he was pleased not only with the size of the crowds that greeted the Queen, but he was also impressed with "the warmth of the crowds."

"... especially today ... you could feel the feeling of good will."

The Queen's visit "is doing a tremendous amount of good to the people of British Columbia," Bennett said.

Between 100 and 200 people waited on the inner wharf and the wharf ramp to watch the yacht depart, but the Queen did not appear as the dinner guests disembarked. The outer wharf where the Britannia was moored remained cordoned off throughout the evening.

A small flotilla of RCMP patrol cruisers and tug boats accompanied the yacht as it slowly manoeuvred out of the harbor at 11:30 p.m.

Found: A Union Jack Of Sentimental Value

It was found by Mrs. has been waved on royal visits ever since its owner, an elderly lady was a child.

It was found by Mrs. William Motherwell after its unknown owner left the coffee shop.

The two women had been chatting as they sat by the front door of the lobby waiting to see the Queen arrive for lunch.

Mrs. Motherwell's acquaintance explained that she had been given the flag when she was a very young girl, and had always taken it with her to wave for royalty whenever they were on tour.

The irreplaceable keepsake is being kept carefully at the Empress in the hope that its owner will be inquiring for it soon.

Hawks Win in Overtime After Goalkeeping Duel

BILL WALKER

Reg Midgely speaks for the crowd that is firmly convinced it has "the only game in town." And the turnout of 4,466 at Western Speedway last Saturday night does nothing whatsoever to dispute this boast. Rather, it fortifies the contention that Auto Racing is No. 1.

This was the first super-stock car race of the new season, and the suburban plant was bulging. A fitting tribute, perhaps, to its coming of age. For this is the 21st season at Western, and right now it has all the earmarks of being one of the most successful.

There were 4,100 fans at opening night to go with last week's overflow, and if Saturday's house was predominantly sub-teen, and young adult, that's part of the selling point.

"We appeal to the family," said Midgely, who doubles as track manager and promoter. "In some groups there may be four or five children. Those under 12 get in free," he explained.

But while the place is often filled — "Sundays are usually a dead loss," said Midgely — every year isn't exactly an instant financial success. "We do have a hard time making any money."

"Our gross gate runs between $125,000 and $150,000 a year," he revealed. "In 1967 our total attendance was 102,000. The last three years we have hit around 98,000. This works out to an average of 2,500 an event.

The problem with breaking even comes from the usual factors. Track maintenance is high — $5,000 was spent on the grandstand this year for a total of $30,000 on improvements in the last four years. Spilled gas rots the track, too, and if cement isn't brushed into the area within a day of the race, the black top just disintegrates, Midgely said.

●

The drivers for their part usually share on a percentage. Normally that works out to about 40 to 45 per cent of the gate.

And what's it worth to a winner?

Gary Kershaw got $375 on Saturday. The main event was worth $300.

It doesn't seem like much, considering the high expense involved, but then racing can be called a participation sport as well. For every driver there are five or six men behind him in the pits, or paying the bils. Even the wives have an organization.

For a major event, such as the ELSCAN competition, which will be held here in June, the money situation is different and better. Major drivers won't come here for peanuts. For example the guarantee for the two-day event is $3,000 or 40 per cent of the gate whichever is greater.

The glamor cars are the super-stocks. The current glamor boy is Gary Kershaw. Kershaw last January earned a rare distinction that has escaped all other Canadians. He won the Permatex 200 at Riverside, Calif. It was the first such stock-car honor to be taken by a driver from outside the U.S.

Last Saturday, Kershaw was matched against the best in the northwest — Hershel McGriff of Portland. And if Hershel couldn't do it, alone he brought along his son, Doug to supply the one-two punch.

Sure enough, the program wasn't minutes old before son Doug had cracked the track record in the qualifying heat. Then it was father's turn. The crowd was still filing in at the track announcer said: "Another new track record by Hershel McGriff."

Now it was up to Kershaw. Recently acclaimed as Victoria's male athlete of the year, he wasn't about to muff his lines. By four-one hundredths of a second he was quicker around the four-tenths of a mile oval than the senior McGriff. In distance, that's five feet.

It became almost a super night for Garv later when he won the main event. But really he was a trifle fortunate that he was still around at the finish. He had come from 19th to first, after the inverted start, and was leading the field when, on the 24th lap, it happened.

●

As he throttled down for the east turn, steam suddenly poured from his engine. Kershaw quickly pulled over. The race was halted. The red flag was out.

"Kershaw has blown his engine," intoned the announcer.

"Gee, that'll cost him $2,000," a spectator muttered.

But wait. While the track crew brushed dry cement onto the slippery part of the racing surface where Kershaw had come apart — "it absorbs the moisture," Midgely explained — Kerhaw's crew was hard at work. It wasn't a blown engine after all. It was just a busted radiator hose. Kershaw was back in the race before the mopping-up was over.

He was on the lead, too, a favor he may not get again. Because officials are planning to change the rules. It is felt that a driver who cguses a stoppage should be penalized, and placed at the end of the line. The far end.

Which is only fair. At least Joe Macmurchie should agree. For of all the drivers in Saturday's main, he was the only one not lapped by Kershaw at the finish.

This is significant too, as Macmurchie last season crewed for Kershaw.

Now, he is saying in effect.

Pappin Fires Winner In Opener of Cup Final

CHICAGO (CP)—No one could blame Billy Reay today if he asks the National Hockey League to follow a suggestion he made in jest.

"Maybe the NHL should adopt a rule to award a point for a tie game in the playoffs," Reay, Chicago Black Hawks coach, said Tuesday night after his club beat Montreal Canadiens 2-1 on Jim Pappin's goal at 1:11 of the second overtime period.

The victory gave the Hawks a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup final. The second game here is scheduled Thursday.

Chicago now has gone into overtime in four of its last six games.

"If we only played 60 minutes in a playoff game now, I wouldn't feel like we had a game," Reay said.

The limited scoring in just over four periods of end-to-end hockey was due mainly to the excellent goaltending of Chicago's Tony Esposito and young Ken Dryden of Montreal.

Jacques Lemaire put Montreal ahead at 12:29 of the middle period, with Chicago's Eric Nesterenko serving a tripping penalty. But Bobby Hull got the equalizer at 7:54 of the third with Lemaire off for interference.

It was Hull's ninth goal of the playoffs with assists going to Pappin and defenceman Pat Stapleton.

Stapleton's assist brought his playoff total to 13 this season, tying a record for defencemen held by Tim Horton of New York Rangers.

Reay said he thought his club was a little flat in the second period, but rebounded in the third and overtime periods.

Pappin Gives Mikita Credit

Pappin, whose only previous record on an NHL overtime scoresheet was a 1967 assist on Bob Pulford's goal against Montreal while he played with Toronto Maple Leafs, said Mikita was instrumental in the winning goal.

"Stanley did all the work on it," Pappin said. "It was my first goal into an empty net."

He said Dryden had moved to the side to cover the play from Mikita, but the Chicago centre still managed to get the puck to his winger.

WAS ROBBED EARLIER

Pappin said his goal was justice in a way as Dryden had robbed him late in the third period of a goal that would have given the Hawks a win in regulation time.

"I was surprised when he stopped that one," Pappin said.

"He just stood his ground and I think I hit him on the shoulder."

"He's a real good goalie," Hull said. "I'll tell you one thing, he doesn't make many mistakes."

Dryden said of Pappin's winning goal:

"I was watching the shot that hit the defenceman, then I was watching Mikita. He had the puck seven or eight feet in front and was alone.

"I didn't see Pappin at all.

"As soon as Mikita passed it, I sprawled, but it was much too late."

Esposito sat sullenly in his cubicle in the Chicago dressing-room slowly unwinding from the tension. He nursed a red welt on his right collarbone from a stop he made on Montreal's Frank Mahovlich.

Asked if he was particularly tired, considering the time he had logged in Chicago's 12 playoff games, Esposito said he felt every player on both clubs was spent by the end-to-end pace.

COACH NOT DISHEARTENED

Montreal coach Al MacNeil said the Canadiens were "not disheartened by the loss."

"We're sorry we lost, because we've got to get one game here," MacNeil said. "But overtime is one big play, one mistake by one side and it's all over."

Reay said he used rookie defenceman Rick Foley, up from the champion Portland Buckaroos of the Western Hockey League, as a replacement for veteran Doug Jarrett after the second period because the latter was "jaded."

"He's tired from all the overtimes we've had," Reay said of Jarrett. "But he'll snap back."

Thursday night's second game could see the return of centre Pit Martin to the Chicago lineup. He sat out Tuesday night's contest with a knee injury.

The Canadiens, losing their first overtime game after winning seven straight extra-period games, were expected to skate after the Chicago club.

Referee Bill Friday called 11 minor penalties, six to Montreal. Each team was assessed a minor in the first overtime period, both times as defencemen took out opposing forwards as they broke in on goal.

DIVIDED ATTENTION

Attention of Montreal clubmates was divided on this play during opening game of Stanley Cup hockey final Tuesday night in Chicago. While goaltender Ken Dryden deflects puck wide of net, defenceman Jacques Laperriere (2) bounces Black Hawk forward Jim Pappin (8) away from goalmouth. Pappin later became Chicago hero by scoring in second overtime period to give Hawks 2-1 triumph over Canadiens. Second game of series is scheduled Thursday. (AP Wirephoto)

Wirtanen Sparkles in Nets As Rocks Bounce Burrards

Victoria Shamrocks will be trying to make it two straight over Vancouver Burrards as the Western Lacrosse Association clubs clash again in the second game of the regular schedule tonight in Memorial Arena.

Goalkeeper Dave Wirtanen and forwards Ivan Thompson and Mike Beaulac helped the Irish open the WLA season on the right footing Tuesday night with a 15-12 victory over host Vancouver Burrards.

Approximately 500 Vancouver fans watched Wirtanen, who proved outstanding in the Irish nets during their lone pre-season exhibition victory over Coquitlam Adanacs, parry 41 shots in another great effort. He made 18 stops in the third period as Vancouver pressed for the equalizer.

Vancouver outshot Victoria 53-47 overall and 20-12 in the final 20 minutes.

Thompson, who recorded an outstanding junior year in Ontario before coming to Victoria during the off season, notched three goals and assisted on two others during his first regular WLA start.

ACTION HALTED

Ross McDonald paced Vancouver with three goals while Brent Ojanen (2), Bob Salt (2), Gord Fredrickson (2), Dave Litzenberger, Brian Davidson and Brian Bergum also scored.

Shamrocks were trailing 4-3 when the first period was stopped two minutes and 56 seconds early for Vancouver goalie Don Hamilton to repair his mask following a blistering shot by Dhillon. The Victoria crew then sprang back to lead 5-4 by the end of the frame and was never headed after taking a 9-8 lead midway through the second period.

Only Frank Alexander, who was scheduled to undergo minor surgery today, will be missing from the Shamrocks' lineup tonight. Bill Spotswood is slated to replace his clubmate on a forward line.

Game time is 8 p.m.

JOHNSON GETS SALARY BOOST

BOSTON (AP) Boston Bruins announced Tuesday that Tom Johnson, who coached the team to the 1970-71 National Hockey League East Division title and its first Prince of Wales trophy in 30 years, has signed a new two-year contract.

Terms were not disclosed, but general manager Milt Schmidt said Johnson received a substantial raise.

Bate Crew Extends Win Skein to Three

Two of the healthiest hits on the tally-sheet were the ones that counted most as Bate Construction nipped Seaboard Construction 2-1 for a third straight triumph in a Victoria Major Men's Softball League game Tuesday at Central Park.

Centre-fielder Ken Bate gave Bates an early lead with a two-out home run in the first inning.

Seaboard, hitless in the first four frames, mounted a threat when pitcher Glen Bullen singled in Jim Morgan to tie the score in the fifth frame.

Barry Jackson then stepped into the breach to relieve starting pitcher Bob Swanson and hold Seaboard hitless the remainder of the game finishing with five strikeouts.

Speaking of Eyes —Ted's Are Best

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (CP-AP) — The ice-blue eyes of Toronto quarterback Joe Theismann ranked with the most efficient in tests conducted recently among professional and amateur athletes.

William J. Beausay of the Bowling Green University education department is testing the efficiency of the eyes of drivers entered in the Indianapolis 500 here later this month.

The drivers are running a poor third to the collegians and the pros, partly, Beaussy says, because they are considerably older on the average.

The tests show how fast the eye can shift from one dot to another, then back. A variation uses four dots.

Ted Williams, who had a phenomenal ability to see a pitched ball all the way to his bat, made the highest score of any athlete Beausay tested.

"An athlete may have 20-20 vision in both eyes and still score poorly in these tests," Beausay said.

"You are virtually blind when your eye is moving. It sees effectively when it stops. The tests show how quickly a person can move his eyes from object to object and how long it takes him to identify it."

Ali Offered One Million

BOSTON (AP) — Boxing promoter Sam Silverman says he has offered Muhammad Ali $1 million or 35 per cent of the live gate and ancillary rights to fight 1968 Olympic heavyweight champion George Foreman in Boston in September.

Ali, formerly known as Cassius Clay, suffered the only loss of his career in his last fight when he was outpointed by Joe Frazier in their showdown for the world title.

Foreman, 22, ranked as the No. 1 contender by the World Boxing Association, is unbeaten in 24 pro fights, with 24 knockouts. His next appearance will be in a 15-round bout with Gregorio Peralta of Argentina in Oakland Monday night.

New Favorite As Levanter Third by Six

CHESTER, England (Reuter) — Levanter, favorite for the Epsom Derby June 2, was decisively beaten in the Chester Vase horse race Tuesday and immediately lost his place in the Derby betting.

Linden Tree, ridden by Duncan Keith, held on gamely to win by a head in a photo-finish with Frascati. Levanter finished six lengths away, third of the five runners.

After the race, one leading London bookmaker installed Mill Reef as the new favorite for the Epsom Derby at 3 to 1, with Levanter and Linden Tree joint second favorites at 8 to 1.

Gilmour Tops Century On Two-Inning Surge

Gilmour Construction lumped all hitting and all scoring into the fourth and fifth innings Tuesday to defeat Centruy Inn 7-5 in a Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's Softball League encounter at Heywood Avenue Park.

Shortstop Bob Walton led Gilmour batters by driving in two runs, one with a double in the four-run fourth inning and the other with a triple in the three-run fifth.

Centre-fielder Barney Spaven hit a double that brought home two runners in the three-run first inning and gave Century Inn a lead. But the Innkeepers could only manage two more runs, without benefit of a hit during the sixth inning.

FORMER PROS TO INSTRUCT AT WORKSHOP

Instruction will be handled by professionals from Washington State when the Victoria and District Baseball Association combines with the B.C. Amateur Baseball Association in staging a "workshop" Saturday at Lansdowne Junior High School.

Registration will begin at 9:30 a.m. and the clinic, limited to coaches, managers and league executives, will run from 10 until 5 p.m. Lunch will be provided and gym shoes should be worn.

Instructors will be Dale Parker, former University of Washington coach, and ex-major leaguers Mal Walton and Harold Haddock. They may be joined by Al Ronning, a scout for Montreal Expos who was a catcher with Victoria in the former Western International League.

Entry Deadline Set For Tennis Tourney

Entry deadline for the B.C. Festival of Sports and Victorian Days open tennis tournament is 7 p.m. Wednesday, May 19.

The week-long tourney begins May 22 and encompasses a full slate of senior (men's and women's) events in singles and doubles categories only as well as junior singles competition in four age groups—under-18, under-16, under-14 and under-12.

All contestants in the competition co-hosted by the Racquet Club of Victoria and the Oak Bay Tennis Club are limited to two events. Entry fee is $1 per event and the contest is open to all players on the lower end of Vancouver Island.

Courts at Carnavon Park and the University of Victoria will also be used for the racquet battles.

Entries may be submitted at the Racquet Club, Oak Bay Tennis Club, Hocking and Forbes Sporting Goods and Victoria Sporting Goods.

Flood Fouled Up Financially

MILWAUKEE (AP) —Curt Flood, Washington Senators outfielder, was near bankruptcy despite his annual $110,000 salary, Senators owner Bo Short said Tuesday night.

His creditors "were getting every bit of his salary," Short said. "He was really fouled up financially."

Flood jumped the American League team last week and went to Europe. The veteran had sat out a year of baseball after filing a suit in federal court against baseball's reserve clause.

An early-season starter for the Senators, Flood had been benched for lack of hitting when he left the United States.

A letter Flood left behind said he was leaving the team because of personal problems.

Short said the problems basically were financial. The club owner said he had told Flood the best way out would have been to file for bankruptcy. However, Flood's attorneys dissuaded him.

"If he had claimed bankruptcy, they wouldn't have been able to touch his salary," Short said. "If he claims bankruptcy now, he would be able to straighten himself out."

A source close to the Washington team said Flood was paying alimony, support for his five children, and had lost money in some bad investments.

Ease Computer Curbs, Gov't Told

By BOB DOUGLAS

OTTAWA (CP) — Government should apply only a minimum of regulation to the computer communications industry, says the man heading the federal study on that industry.

Dr. Hans Jacob von Baeyer, 59, emphasizes this is a personal view. His study group will be making recommendations in October or November to the communications department.

Resignation of Eric Kierans last week as communications minister, over differences on federal economic policy, has no bearing on the 18-month independent study.

The German-born scientist had a broad background in industry and government in Germany, Switzerland and Canada before his appointment to head the study last October.

The study will make recommendations on Canadian control of the industry and methods of ensuring the computer communications network meets the social and economic needs of Canada.

Dr. von Baeyer, a medium-sized man with thinning hair, took time recently to discuss some of the problems. Views are being gathered from the computer communications industry on the degree of government intervention needed as well as on likely future trends.

Dr. von Baeyer in an interview said that much of the actual processing of data is handed to U.S. firms by their Canadian subsidiaries.

CITES EXAMPLE

He pointed to Calgary where oil companies channel data about oil exploration to U.S. headquarters where computers digest the information and produce maps.

"That processing could just as well be done here."

But Dr. von Baeyer is against aggressive government action to compel these companies to do their data processing in Canada.

Some have suggested that information leaving Canada should be taxed. But the study head said he does not believe a tariff on information is feasible.

However, it was possible that gentle pressure on these firms could have some effect.

Dr. von Baeyer favors allowing the computer communications industry to regulate itself except for long-range planning, standardization, individual privacy and quality of performance.

To ensure that Canada maintains some control over its own data, Dr. von Baeyer suggests parallel data banks. U.S. firms would have to keep data in computers in Canada as well as the U.S.

This might lead to all Canadian data being kept in Canada because it would be more economic to have only one data bank, he said.

A separate study group including representatives of the main one and the communications and justice departments is looking into the question of privacy.

Privacy is affected by computers because they are far more efficient and rapid than conventional filing systems. They can provide information once buried in files.

BUILDING DOUBLES

In the first four months of this year, permits worth $2.9 million have been issued including 160 dwellings. In the corresponding period last year, permits were worth $1.7 million.

TIMID CONTRIBUTION TO THE ROYAL BOUQUET was made during Duncan visit by seven-year-old Laura Beth Fielding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Fielding, Fairbridge. Laura Beth told the Queen she had picked them in her back yard, and the royal recipient said the dandelions were "just beautiful." Still a bit awestruck after the Queen had moved on, Laura Beth said Her Majesty was "nice." The more formal bouquet was yellow roses. (Bill Halkett Photo.)

Cave-In Swallows 31 People, Homes

Que. Town Asleep When Hole Opens

Times News Services

ST. JEAN VIANNEY, Que.—The banks of the "River of Broken Lands" sank into an underground stream, swallowing people, homes, bridges and vehicles in this sleeping village Tuesday night, and officials estimated today at least 31 died.

Canadian Armed Forces helicopter pilots said at noon today only two bodies had yet been recovered from thousands of tons of suffocating, slimy clay mud. Another 10 persons were plucked off homes and cars sunk into a crater a mile long and more than 100 feet deep.

Rescue workers pushed through piles of mud they described as "cold lava" today in a desperate search for trapped survivors of a massive earth cave-in near Chicoutimi.

About 70 persons, many screaming and moaning, were rescued overnight from the crater of mud and slime.

Heavy rain fell today in the area as the broken remains of a score of homes tumbled through a gorge into the Riviere des Vases, a small tributary of the Saguenay River.

EVACUATE HOMES

Neighbors and relatives of missing persons waited through the night at the edge of the gorge. Several homes were evacuated and police closed off roads to curious motorists who could see debris of homes floating at dawn in the Saguenay.

Roger Landry searched the area in vain for his wife and five children, then went to stay with relatives in Kenogami.

"It was dreadful, indescribable," he told reporters. He was in the basement of his home when the slide started shortly after 11 p.m.

He ran up to the ground floor. "I called my family until I thought my lungs would burst, but there was no answer."

Jean Boucher was driving along when suddenly the road gave way in front of him. He managed to crawl up the slippery side of the crater but told police he believed his sister-in-law was still in the pit.

A Canadian Forces helicopter pilot, sent in to undertake aerial rescue operations, described the scene as "sheer desolation."

DROP OUT OF SIGHT

Capt. Maurice Roy said a whole chunk of earth and homes simply dropped out of sight into a hole 100 to 125 feet deep.

"There are sheer walls dropping down into mud."

He dropped a leather harness to a woman who said she spent the whole night stranded on the roof of her car in the hole.

"She was in a state of shock but she managed to slip the collar over her head and we raised her up. She told us that her husband had left the car just before the road about a half-mile long dropped out of sight."

GOODBYE TO QUEEN FOR NEXT 6 DAYS

Victoria said goodbye to its Royal visitors for six days today when the Queen, Prince Philip and Anne took off by chartered jet for hectic visits to the B.C. interior.

Two hundred flag-waving citizens, mostly women and children, applauded from the edge of the tarmac at Pat Bay Airport as the Royal Family's chartered Boeing 737 jet took off and wheeled east, the Queen's coat of arms flapping from the cabin window of the red, yellow and silver plane.

Called one of the most hectic days of the visit by tour officials, today's schedule calls for whistle stops at Cranbrook, where the party will change to a smaller Viscount aircraft which can be accommodated at inland airfields, then on to Fort Steele, the Dunrobin area, Selkirk College, Castlegar and Penticton. Arrival time at Penticton is 5:30 p.m.

Carnival Spirit Abounds On Princess' Park Trip

TOFINO — A beach is a fun place and that's just the way it was at Long Beach Tuesday when Princess Anne officially opened the new Pacific Rim National Park on the West Coast of Vancouver Island.

Princess Anne spent a cool 20 minutes on the sands and carpeted platform on the rocks and officially opened the park.

* * *

Children scampered over rocks and explored pools. A group of bead-swinging hippies enjoyed an impromptu rock session with mouth organ accompaniment. Dogs chased each other in and out of the crowd.

For Princess Anne, it was the first of two solo engagements during the 10-day centennial tour of British Columbia on which she is accompanying the Queen and Prince Philip.

After a 50-minute flight from Victoria she was driven to the park's camping ground and then walked to the beach where she met dignitaries and unveiled a dedication plaque.

* * *

For the men, Social Credit MLA Howard McDiarmid of Alberni set a high fashion note by sporting an Indian-style woven conical hat.

Any attempt at formality during the brief ceremony was spoiled by an inquisitive black and white dog who twice dashed on to the dais for a closer look at the proceedings.

Speeches were kept to a minimum.

Provincial Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan said the symbolic dedication of the park with its more than 90 miles of coastline and 50-plus islands "clearly establishes our joint determination that choice areas of our country shall be preserved for all time for all generations."

Indian Affairs and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien said the Pacific Rim Park is one of five new national parks established in the last two years, symbolizing Canadians' recognition of "the need for man to concern himself with a world beyond that of material gain."

* * *

Turning to Princess Anne he added "it is especially fitting that someone of your generation, which has shown itself so aware of the values of nature and the need for conservation, should preside here today."

He described it as "an abstract, free-flowing cosmic xylophone."

Most people didn't hear the princess utter a word but a few Wreck Bay hippies and children were made happy as she walked through the crowd to the helicopter.

* * *

"She asked me if I'd been living here long. She was beautiful," said the woman.

To long-haired Miles Snow, from Montreal, she smiled and said: "There could be a worse place to stay than Long Beach," and to the small children about her feet she explained that she couldn't stay because the helicopter was leaving.

Thirty members of the Sierra Club held huge signs saying "Complete the park" and "Save Tsusiat."

MP David Anderson, Esquimalt-Saanich, who thought the ceremony "a trifle too formal," was definitely behind the Sierra Club's proposal for an extension of Phase 3 in the trail zone, the Tsusiat, Hobitan watershed.

UP-ISLAND TOUR

Protect Environment Message

The royal tour began reaching into the heart of B.C. residents Tuesday with a whirlwind tour of three up-Island communities and Long Beach.

If there was a message in the comings and goings, it was directed towards protection of the environment and appreciation of the bounty it bestows.

Queen Elizabeth gave the province a centennial year pat on the back for all the pioneering that has been done in the past century or so. But she added:

"You must also look ahead and determine to continue the unending work of creating and caring for a satisfying and human existence in these splendid natural surroundings."

The royal visitors had plenty of opportunity to check out the natural surroundings first-hand. While Princess Anne was on a solo trip to the Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, the Queen and Prince Philip travelled by car to Duncan, Ladysmith and Nanaimo.

The crowd of 3,000 waited patiently around the courthouse complex at Duncan for the Queen and Philip, who arrived half an hour after their scheduled 3 p.m. appearance.

A cornerstone was laid by the Queen and a golden trowel now displayed in Duncan City Hall as a memento of the visit. At the welcoming ceremonies themselves, Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife looked more regal than his visitors in flowing purple mayoral robes.

After introductions to selected Duncanites and the laying of the cornerstone for a new library, the city's senior citizen centennial project, the Queen asked Quaife if he would like to retain the trowel used. It had been inscribed to the Queen.

The mayor said he would, and promised to display it in the trophy case.

"Well, we'll consider it a loan until our next trip," Philip said.

RCMP officers estimated 15,000 people lined city streets and surrounded the courthouse area. The 6,000 around the provincial building greeted the visitors with cheers and applause under fretful, cloudy skies.

This conservative crowd, consisting of hundreds of Brownies, Guides, Cubs, Scouts, old age pensioners and a good cross-section of the community who cheered and applauded sparingly had started to slowly gather around the buildings at 10 a.m. and were still rushing in upon her arrival.

The Queen was met by Mayor Quaife in his purple velvet robes who then introduced her to chairman of the Duncan Centennial Committee Martin Lukaitis and his wife.

She then moved slowly past the crowd, stopping occasionally to speak, to where she was then introduced to Mayor of North Cowichan, Gerry Smith, and his mother; Mayor of Lake Cowichan, Moe Ali, and his wife; Cowichan Indian band chief, Dennis Alphonse, and his wife; MLA for Cowichan-Malahat, Robert Strachan and his wife, as well as other officials.

While the Queen and the Duke were working their way to the receiving line the

Trade Suspended on U.S. Dollar As Monetary Turmoil Spreads

FRANKFURT (AP) — The government banks of West Germany and five other European countries suspended trade in United States dollars today, trying to check speculators who are swapping American currency for West German marks in expectation the mark will be revalued upward.

The Canadian dollar moved up in value slightly due to trading in it in Europe, but "the market has been very calm here this morning," a Bank of Canada spokesman said in Ottawa this morning.

International monetary authorities began consulting on ways to halt the flow of U.S. dollars to Europe, creating the worst European financial crisis since 1969.

One way to stop this is to revise upward the value of the mark, and this may be considered at a meeting of the West German cabinet in Bonn on Friday.

The U.S. treasury department is ready to help. The government will offer special securities for purchase by holders of dollars in Europe, thus soaking up excess American currency.

"As necessary, the United States is prepared to raise additional funds in the Eurodollar market and to assist with appropriate investment outlets for foreign central banks," U.S. Treasury Secretary John B. Connally said in a statement.
